

Illness and Misery Following in Wake of Raging Waters

A general scene in the National Guard Armory at Louisville, as those left homeless by the flood tried to compose themselves for a few hours rest. Many of these people have had but few hours of rest since the flood started.

Flood victims who were driven from their homes with insufficient clothing are shown getting new garments in the relief station set up in the Evansville Memorial Coliseum.

Residents of Evansville are shown as they crowded the railway station buying tickets to cities farther north. The city's water pumping station has been forced to stop and the drinking water in storage tanks is being conserved.

Four trucks marooned in an Evansville yard. It will be many days before the owner of these trucks can get close enough to estimate his loss.

The Evansville water works (center building), left an island by the surging Ohio River. Divers today were expected to attempt repair of a conduit in the Evansville water system.

Red Cross headquarters in Indianapolis where the mounting relief contributions are counted and rushed to flood sectors.

THE RED CROSS NEEDS FUNDS TO HELP THE SUFFERERS OF THE WORST FLOOD IN THE HISTORY OF THE NATION---CONTRIBUTE TO THE RELIEF DRIVE--- GIVE NOW TO THE MILE-OF-DIMES!