

APIARY OFFICER TO ATTEND 24 STATE SESSIONS

Starkey to Take Part in Beekeepers' Meetings, Says Simmons.

James E. Starkey, state chief apiary inspector, is to attend Indiana beekeepers meetings in 24 central and southeastern counties, Virgil M. Simmons, Department of Conservation Commissioner, said today.

The meetings are to be held late in March as part of the annual winter program when keepers gather to discuss honey production, bee management, and other problems.

Beekeepers are optimistic over prospects for an improved honey yield and better prices. Indiana normally produces approximately 3 million pounds of honey, the major part of which goes to markets outside the state.

One of the factors considered by beekeepers in pointing to a better production season this year, is the absence of subzero weather. The meetings open tomorrow at Frankfort. Others scheduled are:

March 5—Boone County, Lebanon, 1:30 p. m.; March 6—Hendricks County, Danville, 1:30 p. m.; March 7—Henry County, New Castle, 1:30 p. m.; March 8—Randolph County, Winchester, 1:30 p. m.; March 9—Wayne and Union Counties, Richmond, 1:30 p. m.; March 11—Fayette County, Connersville, 1:30 p. m.; March 12—Franklin County, Brooksville, 1:30 p. m.; March 13—Rush County, Rushville, 1:30 p. m.; March 15—Shelby County, Shelbyville, 1:30 p. m.; March 16—Decatur County, Greensburg, 1:30 p. m.; March 17—Bartholomew County, Columbus, 1:30 p. m.; March 18—Jennings County, North Vernon, 1:30 p. m.; March 19—Dearborn and Ohio Counties, Aurora, 1:30 p. m.; March 20—Ellettsburg, 1:30 p. m.; March 21—Scottsburg, 1:30 p. m.; March 22—Harrison County, Corydon, 1:30 p. m.; March 23—Orange County, Paoli, 1:30 p. m.; March 24—Monroe County, Bloomington, 1:30 p. m.; March 25—Morgan County, Martinsville, 1:30 p. m.

Pulling Up Lamp Posts Barred By Old Greencastle Ordinance

Times Special

GREENCASTLE, Ind., March 3.—Enemies of society here include people who ride a bicycle faster than seven miles an hour; those who introduce snailpox into the city without first notifying the Common Council; others who get run over by streetcars in the middle of the block, and those mean enough to stoop to the low trick of pulling up lamp posts.

If the local police chose to enforce all the municipal statutes, the local jail could be filled most of the time. A recent survey of the statute books revealed that a "scorcher" is—or was, back about 1905 or 1906—one who burns up the local pavements by peddling a two-wheeled bicycle at "dangerous" speeds exceeding 7 m. p. h.

Three-wheelers (velocipedes) are absolutely illegal—it is unlawful to run or ride such a machine on the streets or alleys of Greencastle. Nor may citizens fly a kite on Sunday, or imitate noises of various animals in public places.

Local residents are likewise forbidden to sleep in streets, and from passing within 10 feet in front of a moving streetcar except at regular street crossings. (Only "streetcar" line in operation within the city limits is the Indianapolis-Terre Haute division of the Indiana Railroad's interurban line.)

One ordinance prohibits the leading or driving of a mare or gelding faster than seven miles an hour. Although bicycles and horses are permitted to whizz along at seven miles an hour, railroad "dummies" engines are limited to speeds not exceeding six.

Snowballers and persons carrying "bean flippers" are among malefactors outlawed by the Common Council. They are put in the same category with those who uproot lamp posts. Chief Lawrence Graham said he is glad the citizens don't demand "strict" construction.
