

2D IN FAMILY DIES VIOLENTLY WHILE AT PLAY

Boy, 12, Drowns in Creek, To Be Buried Near Brother, Bullet Victim.

Twelve-year-old Paul Land is to be buried Thursday in New-Crown Cemetery beside the body of his brother, Howard, who died of bullet wounds just 10 months ago.

Paul was drowned in Eagle Creek yesterday as he played with a friend, Norman Norris, 13, of 1340 S. Tremont St. They had been throwing sticks into the water near the Howard St. trestle of the Indianapolis Railways. Norman's dog, Patsy, would swim out and retrieve them.

Norman said he had been standing on the shore and handing the sticks to Paul, who had walked out on a log. Suddenly, Paul's foot slipped and he fell into the water.

He came up and struck out for another log 10 yards away. He swam a few strokes and then something seemed to drag him below the surface, Norman said. He did not come up again.

Donovan Worrell and Raymond Scales, both of 5441 W. Washington St., witnessed the accident from the railroad trestle. They called police and summoned members of Paul's family, who live at 1333 S. Sheffield Ave.

Victor, Paul's brother, assisted police in their hour and a half search for the body and then gave the boy artificial respiration for 45 minutes, along with Jack Romine, 17, of 1370 Hiatt St., a junior life guard at Rhodius Park.

Paul's body was found in 35 feet of water about 10 yards from the place he sank.

Funeral services are to be held at 2 p. m. Thursday in the home. The family is awaiting the return of Joseph Land, a brother living in Los Angeles.

Paul, a pupil at School 49, is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Land; three brothers, David, Victor and Joseph, and three sisters, Ruth, Marie and Naomi. With the exception of Joseph, all are residents of Indianapolis.

Abdication Chapter Basis Of Windsor's Suit Against Novelist and Publishers

Because Geoffrey Dennis (left) wrote "Coronation Commentary," a book about King Edward VIII and his abdication, with references to Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson, the ex-King, now Duke of Windsor, has sued the author and publisher for libel.

Mrs. Simpson Came 'Too Far Below' English Ideal of Feminine Royalty, Dennis Says, and Takes Pot Shots at American Expatriates in London.

Just what is there in Geoffrey Dennis' book, "Coronation Commentary," that caused the Duke of Windsor to file a libel and injunction suit against the author and his publishers?

Dennis, a distinguished English novelist, wrote this book—or most of it—a year or so ago. It was designed as a coronation-time specialty, apparently, and it was largely a review of the history of British kingship and British coronations, closing with a glowing tribute to the then King, Edward VIII.

Just as the book was finished Edward abdicated, and Dennis added a final chapter on the abdication. The book appeared, and the Duke of Windsor promptly sued both Dennis and the publishing house of William Heinemann, Ltd., for libel, asking also an injunction against further publication of the book. The book then was withdrawn from sale in England, but the American edition has been released by Dodd, Mead & Co.

What is in it to stir the former King to such wrath?

Abdication Chapter Answer
You need only to read Dennis' chapter on the abdication to find out.

In it, discussing the reason why the British public refused to let Edward retain his throne and marry the American Wallis Warfield Simpson, Dennis says:

"She came too far below, she clashed too crudely, with the nation's idea and ideal, dream and myth, of feminine royalty. Queen Elizabeth, Queen Victoria, Queen Alexandra, Queen Mary, the ladies of York, Gloucester, Kent—which ever standard, among these variant high ones, of English queenship your own might happen to be, the new aspirant did not fit it. Ideals are ideals. Ideals must be idols. She would NOT DO. The comedown from Queen Mary to Queen Wallis was too steep."

His Expatriate Americans
Dennis also takes some pot shots at the free-spending, heavy-drinking set of American expatriates in London with whom he complains, Edward had cast his friendship. So there is this paragraph:

"The invaders, of course, were not beloved. They were a rule no credit to the great country they had exploited and deserted, nor to the one in which they now were roosting and ruling. . . . They were cock-a-hoop, and since Edward's accession were getting insolent and out-of-hand. There was but one more word to conquer. The first word was to sit in the ancient Commons was a divorced American; why not then also—?"

And this:
"England is proud, and minded seeing her throne provide a musical turn for low foreign newspapers. The country bitterly resented the other country's brazen delighted cheapening of its high possession—the tabloid press jeering, interfering—and in its anger naturally, if ungratefully, ignored the correct and cordial tone of
