and the restoration of normal international conditions of commerce and exchange are part and parcel of one gigantic problem.

"In Europe," he said, "where for many months on end people have been subjected to one tremendous shock after another, and where the competition in armaments follows a faster rhythm than ever before. Economic records can hardly be reached independently of political records."

"What nation will consent to co-operate with another nation, either to provide credits, to help it obtain raw materials, to facilitate colonization, or in any other way, so long as it fears that such help might some day be used against it in military form?"

"There exists, therefore, a very real connection between economic co-operation on the one hand and, on the other, the pacification of the world and the stopping of the armaments race."

"This connection is just as evident if the problem is reversed. I am convinced that the very excess of armaments will oblige Europe to reconsider the whole question of disarmament. Any agreement to limit armaments must of necessity be made an integral part of a general European settlement."

"But today war manufacturers occupy such a place in world production that it would probably be impossible to call a sudden halt without exposing industrial nations to grave domestic crises."

Nevertheless, he said, today and tomorrow France will be found prepared to prove by its acts its ardent will to join the rest of the world in achieving that security, the lack of which weighs down so heavily today upon peoples everywhere.

Armed Attention

M. Blum agrees with former Premier Baldwin of Britain, who said that today "Europe is neither at war nor at peace, it stands at armed attention." But he added:

"If I were in the insurance business, underwriting the risks of war, I believe I should lower my premiums. The odds at the moment seem to be in favor of peace. But the balance is still extremely delicate, adjusted and it would take little to swing it the other way."

The peace of Europe, said M. Blum, is "indivisible." It cannot be safeguarded by mere bilateral accords. So far as France is concerned, she will continue to be faithful to the League of Nations and to other obligations she has contracted throughout Europe.

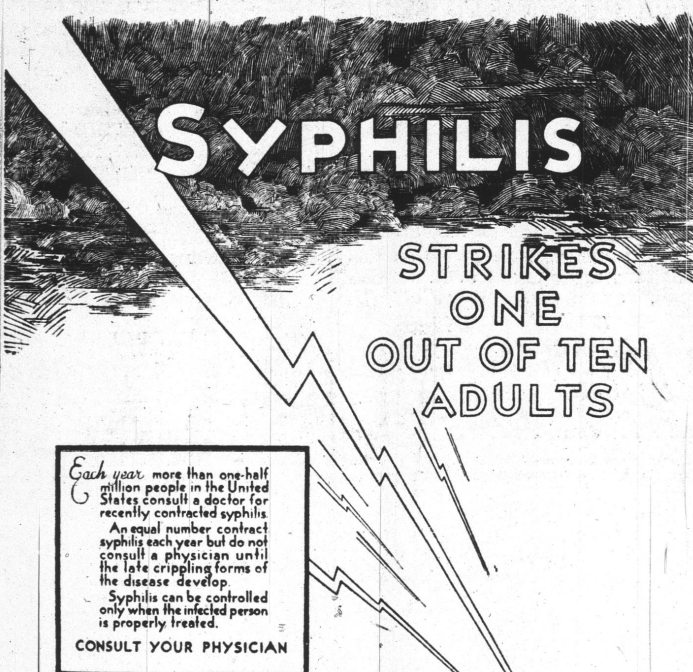

Spain, he concluded, continues to be Europe's most dangerous spot. He has not entirely abandoned hope that the foreign volunteers fighting there may be withdrawn. But at the moment there is no telling how long the bloodshed will continue.

Artificial Fever Treatment of Syphilis Found Wanting, Claim

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., June 8.—Artificial fever treatment for syphilis, widely heralded when first developed, has not stood the test of time as well as the chemicals, arsenamine and bismuth, Dr. Paul A. O'Leary of the Mayo Clinic, Rochester, Minn., told members of the American Medical Association here today.

Even those physicians who were most enthusiastic about machines for inducing fever to rout syphilis from the body now recommend, as do those who use malaria to induce fever, the use of arsenamines and bismuth during, or after the fever treatment in all types of syphilis.

Besides malaria and electric fever machines, typhoid vaccine and hot baths have been found helpful in treating some cases of syphilis. No one knows exactly why any of these methods is helpful. Dr. O'Leary himself believes that these treatments cause some fundamental change in the immunity or disease resistance of the body.

The infant death rate in families in which there is syphilis was 75 per cent in the days before drugs were discovered that would cure the disease. Dr. Harold N. Cole of Cleveland reported. It is probably from 20 to 30 per cent even now.

Babies can be protected from this disease if their mothers are given antisyphilitic treatment during the months before the birth of the child. If the mothers are not treated, the child of syphilitic parents will either die or within a few weeks after birth show signs of the disease including the "snellie" little old man appearance characteristic of syphilis in infants. These babies are restless, cry feebly, and often have a reddish brown skin eruption. Bones may be involved and the child may act as if paralyzed. Teeth, bones, joints, brain and nervous system, eyesight and hearing may all be affected by congenital syphilis.

generally upon Premier Blum's suggestions.

Dr. Frederick J. Libby, director of the National Council for Prevention of War, commented Premier Blum's simplified plan to check international arms rivalry as offering possibility of a "very definite step toward limitation."

DOCTORS URGE EDUCATION IN HEALTH NEEDS

Medical Association Leaders
Stress Importance of
New Developments.

(Other Stories on Medicine on

(Copyright, 1937, by Science Service)

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., June 9.—

The importance to the public of medical education was stressed by two presidents of the American Medical Association at its opening meeting here today.

"The quality of medical services depends on medical education," declared Dr. Charles Gordon Heyd, New York, president of the association during the past year.

"Our best argument against the establishment of foreign schemes of medical education is the continued maintenance of the high plane of medical practice in this country," said Dr. J. H. J. Upham, Columbus, O., who will be installed at this meeting as president for the coming year.

The messages of these two medical leaders were that the most important way to provide adequate medical care for the public is for doctors to keep themselves posted on latest medical discoveries and be prepared to apply them in treating their patients.

Suggests Periodic Quiz

Three ways of doing this were outlined by Dr. Upham. These are constant improvement of the training of young doctors in medical schools and hospitals; meetings of doctors and medical scientists, such as the present meeting, and the other hundreds of medical meetings held every year in the United States, and postgraduate courses for practicing physicians, especially those far from medical centers.

Dr. Upham suggested requiring periodic examinations every five or 10 years to determine which physicians had kept up with advances in medical knowledge and were entitled to their licenses to practice renewed.

The doctor of the future will need to be well educated and in close personal touch with his patients because he will be treating entirely different kinds of ailments, Dr. Heyd pointed out. The day of mass medicine in medicine, by which diseases like typhoid fever, diphtheria, syphilis and malaria can be controlled, is going out.

With these old plagues under control, and with more and more of the population in the older age brackets, he said, the important diseases of the future will be diseases of old age, such as heart and kidney disease, cancer, pneumonia and apoplexy.

of Labor disclosed he had requested all loyal union officers to begin immediate payment of an emergency assessment of 1 per cent per member per month to build up a "war chest" for the battle with the C. I. O.

This assessment was voted at a special meeting of the A. P. of L. executive council with union leaders in Cincinnati, last month. H. J. Copeland (D. N. Y.) today proposed a "broad and thorough" Senate investigation of national labor disputes and strikes.

Copeland made his suggestion in connection with the resolution introduced by Senator Bridges (R. N. H.) for inquiry into alleged interference with the mails by strikers in the steel controversy.

ACT ON LOANS FOR FLOOD AID, MINTON TO URGE

Senator Plans Floor Attack
On Disaster Corp.
For Slowness.

Times Special

WASHINGTON, June 9.—Senator Minton said he would attack failure of the Disaster Loan Corp. to expedite loans to flood-ravaged regions from the Senate floor today.

The corporation was organized five months ago to make "character loans" to flood victims for property rehabilitation. Given a capital of $20,000,000 from Reconstruction Finance Corp. funds, the DLC actually has disbursed only $2,650,900.79, Jesse H. Jones, RFC chairman, disclosed in a report to the Senate.

The report shows that on May 31, there had been $5,013,148.05 loans "authorized" in Arkansas, Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, Mississippi, Missouri, Ohio, Tennessee and West Virginia.

321 Hoosier Loans Made
In Indiana, 532 loans have been authorized amounting to $686,895 and disbursements of $345,358.09 made in 321 cases. Sixty-eight authorizations, amounting to $41,665 were made in 321 cases. Sixty-eight authorizations, amounting to $41,665 were cancelled or withdrawn.

"The Disaster Loan Corp. has been functioning for five months and has $14,986,851.95 of the $20 million left," Senator Minton commented, "So far as fulfilling its purpose is concerned, it could just as well have chartered a Showboat and hired a Glee Club to float down the Ohio and Sing 'River Stay Away From My Door.'"

Hearings are being held by the House Flood Control Committee on a bill which provides for approximately $25,000,000 for levees, flood walls and rainage structures along the Ohio River. Jeffersonville, Clarksville and Lawrenceburg are the Indiana towns mentioned for such construction in the bill.

By United Press

EVANSTON, Ill., June 9.—A laboratory test whereby your dentist will be able to predict tooth decay months in advance and take steps to prevent it was announced by eight Northwestern University scientists today after a four-year investigation.

Dr. Arthur D. Black, university dental school dean, said the process had been used successfully in 750 cases and determines in five hours a person's susceptibility or immunity to dental decay.

"The advantage of the new chemical test over other methods is that it is more certain and permits an almost immediate diagnosis of most conditions leading to decay," the university announcement said. "A program of control for the individual can now be set up."

MONROE OWSLEY SCREEN 'CAD,' DEAD

HOLLYWOOD, June 9.—The body of Monroe Owsley, 36, movie actor who died in Belmont, Cal., was brought to Hollywood today for a funeral in Memorial Park where Jean Harlow's rites were scheduled a few hours earlier.

a reproduction of Miss Harlow's girl signature and the dates "1911-1937."

Two of the star's former husbands, Charles F. McGrew, wealthy young broker, and Hal G. Rosson, movie cameraman, attended the services.

None of Miss Harlow's famous jewels adorned her as she lay in her coffin. Her honey-colored hair presented the familiar coiffure which was the joy of her fans the world over; and she lay clad in a shell-pink organdie gown, with blue satin ribbon about the waist and silver sandals on her feet.

One of the largest floral pieces at the chapel was sent by Louis B. Mayer, head of the studio which employed Miss Harlow. It was a huge heart fashioned from gardenias and roses.

Myrna Loy Sends Spray

Myrna Loy sent a large spray of white gladioli and a card saying "With my utter devotion."

Warner Baxter, close friend of both Miss Harlow and Powell, sent gladioli with a card attached saying "Our loving sympathy." John Bennett sent a sheaf of French roses.

Services were opened by Jeanette MacDonald, beautiful blond film songstress, who sang "The Indian Love Call." Miss MacDonald was followed by Mrs. Genevieve Smith, Christian Science reader, who was closely associated with Miss Harlow during the star's rise from extra ranks to film dominance.

At one point the services were interrupted by the drone of airplanes. Major film executives cast angry glances around and Mrs. Smith paused a moment before she started reading portions of the text of Science and Health, the Christian Science ritual.

Clark Gable was a pall bearer. He was at work with Miss Harlow on production of the picture "Saratoga," when she became ill last week.

Notables are Pall Bearers

Other pall bearers were Edgar J. Mannix, Miss Harlow's business manager; Hunt Stormberg, M-G-M producer; Jack Conway, director of "Saratoga"; W. S. Van Dyke, director; and Ray June, cameraman who filmed many of Miss Harlow's successes.
