

Girl Doubts Boy Wants Marriage

Jane Receives Reply to Letter Written by 'Not Sure.'

NOTE—This letter is in reply to a youth of 21 who signed himself "Not Sure" and asked if a young girl of 15 can be sure she is permanently in love and will be happy in marriage.

DEAR JANE JORDAN—I believe I am the girl mentioned in a letter written by "Not Sure." In my opinion "Not Sure" is trying to back out of a marriage bargain. I know it if he is my bridegroom—that might have been.

Like a fool I put my soul into this man's hands. He promised to be a model husband and to provide happy years of married life. Now that the wedding date is so near he is beginning to be afraid. He is so young that he hates to give up all the amusements for a wife.

You said that in this day and age a girl of 15 was not capable of real love—a love that exists for years. Perhaps you did not go through your life without really loving someone from the time you were a young girl, but that doesn't mean that I cannot love "Not Sure" forever. I realize that you are older and have much more experience. If I seem rude, I apologize. I can't feel that I am getting a square deal from "Not Sure" yet I would not make him marry me for anything. If he loves me enough to marry me I shall consent, but otherwise, never!

You probably wonder why I still want to marry "Not Sure" in spite of the little hurts and disappointments. I would take him faults and all because I love him. Perhaps you can give me some advice.

DREAM GIRL. Answer—Far be it from me to be a little young girl's first love affair or to underestimate the strength, importance and loveliness of her feeling. Often it is the keenest and sweetest that she will feel during her lifetime, and the person who brushes it aside as of no moment is indeed shortsighted.

You missed the whole point of my letter. I do not question your capacity for feeling, or even its longevity under favorable conditions. What I said was that the cards are stacked against the success of a too-youthful marriage in this day and age.

I repeat that in the old days a boy of 21 had fought in wars, tilled the soil and matured under responsibilities which are not thrust on youth today. A 15-year-old girl had learned to work as hard as her mother. The young couple of yesterday did not expect the equipment for housekeeping that is expected today. Everybody did with-out conveniences which we take for granted today and feel abused if we do not have.

To throw a 21-year-old boy and a 15-year-old girl into matrimony is like taking freshmen from high school and expecting them to succeed in college without benefit of the intervening education. They simply haven't the ghost of a chance.

Already you see "your boy" friend squirming because he doesn't want to give up his amusements for the responsibilities of a married man. He hasn't the urge for permanence or the capacity for sacrifice which move you. Love isn't half so consuming or important to him as it is to you. What kind of a life will you have with a boy whose growth has been forced because he couldn't handle wisely his first case on a girl?

It has been said that the most valuable thing in the world is given away free to people who reject it. It is the advice of the old to the young, based on their own bitter experiences. Marry him if you must and one day perhaps you will try in vain to convince a 15-year-old girl that she is not ready for marriage. Be a one thought in mind: That the difference between maturity and immaturity is that an adult can postpone for the present in the interest of a more satisfactory future; the adolescent will sacrifice the future for the sake of the present.

JANE JORDAN.

Mr. and Mrs. LeRoy Chloupek, whose marriage took place at 10 a. m. today at the St. Peter and Paul Cathedral, were to leave on a short trip and are to be at home in Pittsburgh after July 1.

Mrs. Chloupek was Miss Beatrice Raphael, Dilworth, Minn. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Caroline Chloupek of this city.

The Rev. George Dunn officiated at the ceremony. Miss Gretchen Rehfeld, Dilworth, Minn., the maid of honor, wore aquamarine lace and carried tulle roses, and white sweet peas.

The bride was dressed in gray lace and carried American Beauty roses and lilies of the valley. Harold Chloupek was best man.

A luncheon was given at noon for the bridal party and guests at Holbrook Hill.

'Be Yourself—Twice,' Is Star's Hair Beauty Recipe

"Be yourself—twice!" is the recipe for hair-beauty of lovely Doris Nolan, sparkling Hollywood starlet. Simplicity goes all day, as witness Doris' picture above, showing the long loose bob she specially likes. But, at night—

Miss Nolan's formal coiffure is much more complicated. The young movie star uses a braid of her own hair, winding it about her head like a halo and curling her bob around it. To change the hair this way is as refreshing as a dip in the surf, says Doris.

Old-Fashioned Yankee Dishes Can Provide Relaxation Still

By MRS. GAYNOR MADDOX
NEA Service Staff Writer

The Yankees may have been a bit stern when it came to matters of love, but they had a way of relaxing at eating time. Just try a few of these old-fashioned Yankee recipes to see what that meant.

Yankee Cole Slaw Dressing

(4 to 8 servings)

One cup milk, 1 1/2 tablespoons flour, 1/2 teaspoon salt, 1/2 cup vinegar, 2 tablespoons sugar, 1/4 cup vinegar, 1 tablespoon butter, 1 egg, 2 quarts shredded cabbage.

Measure out 1/2 of the milk. Scald. Measure and sift flour, salt and mustard together. Using the cold milk, make a smooth paste. To paste, slowly add hot milk and cook in double boiler. Heat vinegar and slowly add to dressing when it has thickened. Beat egg together with sugar. Add to dressing. Pour over cabbage. Chill thoroughly.

Solution to Previous Problem

By WILLIAM E. M'KENNEY
American Bridge League Secretary

When your partner at bridge has opened the bidding, the choice of a response sometimes is governed by whether you are prepared for what partner may say on the next round is because South was adequately prepared for such contingency that he made his light response on today's hand.

This feature of bidding is one that amateurs, and even experts, are prone to overlook, and failure to provide for what partner may say on the next round is at the root of many bridge table disasters.

Some players would prefer a spade response to the opening bid, but it is improbable that North's spade holding would be such as to make that desirable. If his hand is so strong that he would want to reverse, then so much the better.

When North bid two diamonds, South then showed his preference, and felt even strong enough to carry the contract to game, after

Larmore-Jupin Wedding Today

The Rev. Ephraim D. Lowe is to officiate at the marriage ceremony of Miss Maude Jupin and William S. Larmore at 7:45 p. m. today. The wedding is to take place in the Olive Branch Christian Church.

The bride is to be given in marriage by her brother, Lawrence Jupin. She is to wear a white satin gown with a lace yoke and a finger-ring veil with a cap trimmed with orange blossoms. She will carry bride roses.

Miss Mona Jupin, who is to be maid of honor to her sister, will wear orchid marquisette with a peach halo hat and peach accessories.

Miss Suzanne Larmore, the bridegroom's sister, is to be bridesmaid. Her gown of peach marquisette is to be worn with turquoise blue accessories and halo hat. Both attendants will carry yellow souvenir roses.

Marian Cameron, flower girl, is to be dressed in a yellow marquisette with a matching head band and will carry a basket of rose petals. Lawrence Jupin Jr. is to carry the ring in a lily.

Raymond Hartson is to be best man and the ushers will be Melvin Winzenread and Arthur Hall.

and boil slowly until tomatoes are transparent and the juice the consistency of light cream. Pour into jars and seal. If pickle is to be used immediately, place in crocks and chill in refrigerator. Tomatoes should be firm and not too ripe. Allow 1/4 pound waste for every pound tomatoes purchased.

Those Yankee recipes were collected by the American Dietetic Association for its last convention. But this recipe for old-fashioned Yankee molasses brazed bars reflects their critical attention.

Molasses Brazed Bars

One-half cup shortening, 1/4 cup boiling water, 1 cup brown sugar, 1/2 cup molasses, 3 cups flour, 1 teaspoon ginger, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, 1/2 teaspoon nutmeg, 1/2 teaspoon soda, 1/2 teaspoon salt, 1 cup chopped Brazil nuts.

Put shortening in bowl, add boiling water, and when melted stir in sugar and molasses. Sift dry ingredients together and stir into bowl. Chill. Roll thin, cut into fancy shapes. Sprinkle with chopped nuts and bake in moderately slow (325 degrees F.) oven for about 10 minutes. They belong in any self-respecting old-fashioned picnic basket.

Writer Tells Right, Wrong Time to Talk

Advises Parents to Give Their Children Early Instructions.

By OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

There is a time for talking and a time to keep quiet. This rule excepts no one, old or young, and the earlier it is learned the better, because it is the watermark of good breeding.

Many adults who are meticulous about this rule regarding each other, do not apply it to their relations with children.

When children are present, most grown-ups have an idea that they must pre-empt all the conversation. They expect Charles to keep quiet and are very surprised when he doesn't. Yet, Charles' mother or her friends think nothing of interrupting him when he starts on a story.

"Mother," pleads Charles, when the chatter of the ladies has gone on for half an hour without a pin-hole for him to breathe through. "Don't interrupt Mrs. Smith, darling," warns his mother.

Unreasonable Elders

Charles settles himself for another wait. Then after a bit, he begins again. "Mother, may I—"

"Be quiet," she signals with a frown. "Mrs. Foster, I'm sorry. As you were saying?"

Finally Charles' patience wears thin, breaks right in. "Mother, Billy Jones wants me to go over and play."

Mrs. Anderson, the speaker now, stops, stares and wonders why the boy is there anyway.

"You'll get dirty, Charles. I'm afraid. Don't you like mother's party?"

Charles tries not to say what he thinks, that he is bored to death. "Better stay here, I might need you later."

In a few minutes, the boy interrupts again. And then again. And afterward he is lectured.

Sauce for the Gander

It doesn't hurt children to be quiet and to learn to wait for their turn. Many of them barge into the middle of older people's conversation and become nuisances. But they have a right to be heard at the right-time and place, and to get a word in now and then.

Get a few older people together, and they act as though it were their divine right to talk down the children. I have seen this type of selfishness so often that I am moved to speak of it now.

Children often learn to interrupt because they have no other way of being heard. Charles' mother could have said, "I beg your pardon, Mrs. Anderson, or Mrs. Smith. Do you mind if my boy speaks to me for a moment?" It was due the child, who had remembered his manners for so long, and waited patiently for a break that never came.

Arthritis Rich Field For Quacks

Little Merit in Many 'Popular' Remedies, Is Claim.

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN
Editor American Medical Journal

The wide prevalence of arthritis which is today among the most important of all disabling diseases, causes it to be especially a rich field for work by quacks.

In one great clinic, 7 per cent of all the patients treated suffer from chronic rheumatism. In a large Boston hospital 11 per cent of all the patients had this condition. There are many varieties of rheumatic disease and self-treatment may lead to difficulties.

Patients pursue cures all over the world and may be seen in various resorts and in towns infected with quacks trying treatments that are without any established value.

Quacks Are Varied

Seventy-five per cent of the patients coming to one large clinic with arthritis had previously consulted various nonmedical practitioners, masseurs, bone adjusters, electric quacks, radium quacks, light treatment quacks and had also tried a half dozen different varieties of patent medicines.

The patient is likely to feel better on nice warm days and worse on cold, rainy days. Not realizing the fact that the disease seems to be better on some days and worse on others, he is likely to credit the last treatment he took with the improvement.

In Germany, there are 6000 rheumatic cures that have been sold. The records of the American Medical Association include more than 500 different patent medicines now being promoted for rheumatism.

Sedatives Are Used

Most of these medicines contain some product of salicylic acid or some other alkaline preparation or a pure sedative drug. There are, of course, cases in which the use of one or all of these drugs may be inadvisable.

The worst danger in their use lies in the fact that the patient may feel better for a while and thereby fail to avail himself of the necessary steps to obtain permanent control of his disease.

Whenever a doctor recognizes the fact that there are innumerable remedies offered for a certain type of disease, he realizes that not one of these remedies is really a specific.

For instance, in the treatment of diphtheria we have diphtheria antitoxin as a specific treatment. In malaria, quinine and its preparations have certain value.

In rheumatism the methods applied are nonspecific in that they are used primarily to control the symptoms and improve the circulation of the blood, to benefit the patient's hygiene and increase his resistance, so that the body itself will stimulate all its natural forces to overcome the disease.

Lorena Jones Wed To John T. Davies

A nuptial high mass was solemnized at St. Philip Neri Church this morning when Miss Lorena Margaret Jones became the bride of John Thomas Davies.
