200 Die in Nation, Check Reveals

(Copyright, 1937, by United Press)

Violence had brought death to more than 200 persons in 30 states as the nation entered the last day of the last holiday week-end of the summer today.

Airplane and automobile accidents, lightning, drownings, suicides, even a duel, added to the three-day toll which the National Safety Council predicted would reach 1000.

Automobile accidents alone claimed 137 lives in 30 states and the District of Columbia Saturday and Sunday. Michigan and California reported 21 automobile deaths for the two days, and Illinois 13 and New York 12.

Two Navy fliers were killed when their plane crashed into an open field near Friendsville, Md. A licensed flier and a student were killed in an attempted takeoff at Minneapolis, Minn.

Four Killed by Bolt

Two golfers and two caddies were killed by lightning when they sought refuge from a storm under a tree on a Pittsburgh course. Another caddy fell into a flooded ditch and drowned at Meadville, Pa. Lightning killed Henry Lamonte, 40, in Lambi, Ind.

A man leaped to his death from the 24th floor of Louisiana's State House, in Baton Rouge.

Nine were injured, but none hurt when Andrew Solis crashed his car into a ditch to avoid hitting a train at a Chicago crossing.

Owner of Trailer Converts It Into Gas Execution Chamber

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 6 (U. P.).—Carl B. Yeargin converted his automobile trailer into a lethal gas chamber yesterday and died like a condemned criminal by his own hand.

He timed his death with an alarm clock and left one request: "Bury me whole."

While he lay on the floor waiting for the clock to execute him, he wrote a note to a woman named "Jean." And after he had died, a woman who signed her name "Jean" slipped a note to him under the trailer door, evidently unaware that he was dead.

He was 44, a machinist from South Carolina.

His device consisted of two sticks, one attached to the key stem of the alarm clock and the other dangling from a piece of string. With a sack of potassium cyanide tablets tied to it, as the alarm went off, the string unwound and the cyanide was lowered into a sugar bowl containing a sulphuric acid solution. The fumes created the same deadly gas, and in much the same manner, that states use in executions.

On the door of the trailer he had posted the warning: "Danger! Poison. Only the law shall enter here."

His motive was obscure. He left notes written on cardboard saying: "I am in the best of health. This is why I have the courage to do this."

"It would be a hideous mistake for anyone to think I did this job on account of anyone—I am doing this because of the treacherous game that I have failed to find true life with those I have expected," he wrote.

"Some say die and go to hell. I say die and get out of hell. I am crazy but I see where I am wise over a lot of others. I can't live without playing someone's fool, so I refuse."

Beside his body on the floor, apparently his last work, was the note to Jean reading:

"Bye bye, my little Jewish girl. I union because it meant the black-list and the refusal to hire."

"The labor movement sprang from deep convictions of liberty and freedom," he said. "The laboring man resolved that he was not to be a slave to an unknown master, the machine. It became apparent that men must deal with employers through agents of their own selection. Employers were long to recognize this principle."

"For many years the Government had refused to give an impartial hearing to the rights of labor," Mr. Hutson declared. "In many tragic instances, Government agencies were used to break the spirit of labor."

"Many employers regarded cheap labor as an asset, but the depression taught us all a great lesson. We learned that if labor does not have purchasing power, the entire industrial system will collapse."

The commissioner said five years ago the nation was on the verge of a revolution but "we were saved from this danger by a new conception of government."

Mr. Hutson described the mini-

CHILD CRIME WAVE REPORTED IN VIENNA

VIENNA, Sept. 6 (U. P.).—Juvenile delinquencies have increased more than 100 per cent in the past year as compared to only 1 or 2 per cent among adults here. The prosecutor decried the neglect of parents who allowed their children to stray in the streets at late hours and find unwelcome companions.

The leader of this schoolboy gang, a surly lad of 16, and his pal, Lieutenant Franx, 15, were given suspended sentences of six and four weeks, respectively.

mum wage and hour laws as great protection for the workers and a stabilizer for industry."

"The Wagner Labor Act removes the shadow of fear from many workers who had been intimidated by threats, dismissal and the black-list. Labor had won its bill of rights," he said.

181 Cases Adjusted

The commissioner reviewed the work of the state labor division, explaining that no demands are made for acceptance of the commission's decisions.

"The mediators merely point out ways in which adjustments can be effected," he said.

The commissioner pointed out that the state labor division, since it was established April 1, had received 230 cases involving more than 76,000 workers. Of these, 181 cases have been adjusted, enabling 65,000 workers to remain on their jobs or return to them, he said.
