

Child 'Murder' Is Exaggerated

The confession of Philip Krahl, 27, that he had murdered Helen Whebley, 6, and her brother, Frank, 3, in an attempted attack, proved to be a happy exaggeration when they were found near their home in Philadelphia. Above, the father, Frank Whebley, clutches his children lovingly in happy conclusion to the tragedy.

OWN ORDERS LAND HIM IN JAIL CELL*Alleged Bandit Sends Taxi Driver to Headquarters.

DETROIT, Sept. 10 (U.P.)—Albert Lablanc, 27, sat in a police headquarters cell today, rueing the fact that his knowledge of public buildings was so meager.

He hailed the cab of William Stevens late last night. With his hand in his pocket, simulating a revolver, Leblanc held up the cab driver, robbing him of more than $10, police said.

"Now drive me to Beaumont and Macomb Sts.," Leblanc ordered.

Stevens complied, halting his cab before a large building on the corner.

Leblanc dashed out of the cab but was stopped before he had gone 20 feet. Stevens had stopped his cab in front of police headquarters during a change of shifts.

Memphis Asked for It; Rep. Chandler Sends a Booklet

Times Special
WASHINGTON, Sept. 10—Rep. Walter Chandler (D. Tenn.) has peevishly sent the strong Ed Crump organization of Memphis, which elected him to Congress about three years ago.

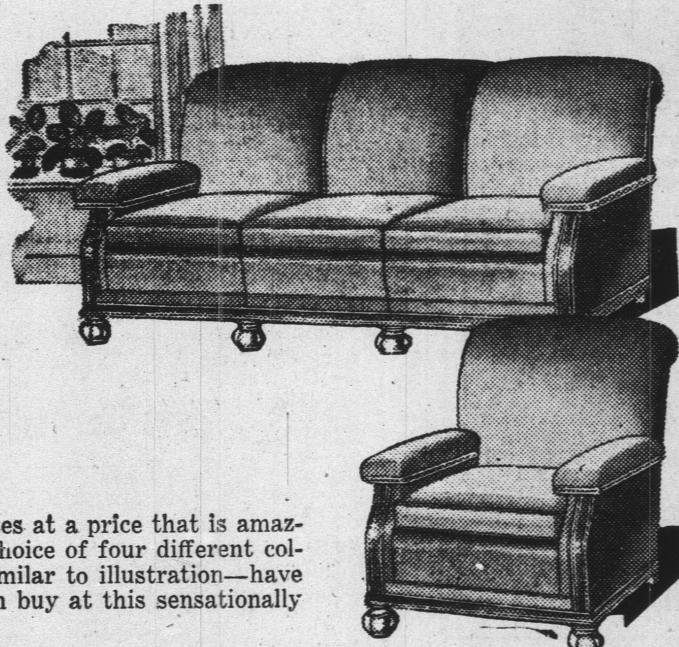

Organization leaders in Memphis accuse him of not doing enough to get Federal "pork" money for Memphis in the form of PWA projects. Rep. Chandler denies this, saying he did all he could to get the projects approved.

Before the fuss, the Memphis City Government planned a municipal fair, and Rep. Chandler's office was asked to furnish some Government bulletins (such as are regularly distributed to farmer constituents) for distribution at the fair.

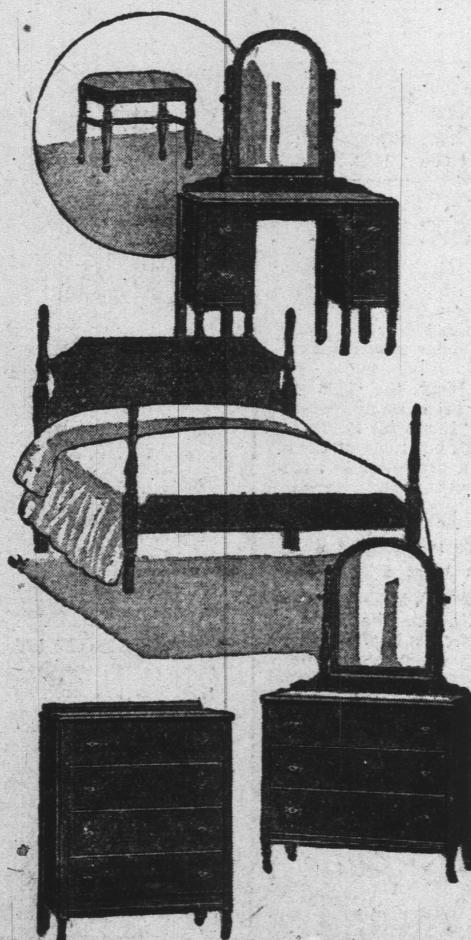

This week, Rep. Chandler's office is sending 10,000 of these booklets covering various topics to Memphis.

The title of one is "Pork in Preferred Ways."

PWA HEAD IN HAMMOND
Forrest Logan, State PWA Director, today is to attend the dedication of the new Hammond High School building, a PWA project.

Guard Crossings.

Indiana leads all other states in the use of Federal funds for installation of flasher warning signals at highway-railroad intersections, the State Highway Commission reported today.

Sixteen per cent of all signals installed under this Federal safety program have been placed in Indiana.

Earl Crawford, Commission chairman, said signals have been installed at 182 Indiana crossings.

The Texas total is 149 and is the next largest, and North Carolina is third with 108. Illinois, Kentucky and Michigan are among the states where no flashers have been installed with Federal funds, while Ohio is credited with only three installations, he said.
