

'Dress Up' Franks for Tasty Dish

'Red Hot' Crown Roast
New Way to Serve
Old Favorite.

The annual Indianapolis Times cooking school will be conducted by Ruth Chambers, Oct. 13, 14 and 15.

Frankfurters, of course! When you're going on a picnic, or for a hastily prepared supper, or any day for lunch, these faithful friends never let you down!

But how do you treat them? Of course they are good broiled on the end of a stick over a picnic fire, especially when they've been split open and treated to a dab of mustard. Or, if you aren't expert at managing a stick or fork, you might place them in a long-handled corn-popper and hold this over the fire. There's less chance of casualties then.

Many Uses for Them
At home, frankfurters and potato salad are so popular a combination that one dish usually suggests the other. That is a tasty, hearty dish, especially if you are a good potato salad maker.

But there are other ways of using this spicy, appetizing food. Here you ever used frankfurters to give flavor to other dishes, using them, for instance, in dressing?

A very dressy way to serve frankfurters, and one which would make a real hit at an informal party, is a "crown roast" of frankfurters. Here the way it is prepared, and also here are other suggestions for serving frankfurters:

"Red Hot" Crown Roast

1 1/2 pounds frankfurters
3/4 pound sliced bacon
Bread dressing

Heap stuffing in compact mound on a roasting pan. Thread frankfurters on a string; arrange around stuffing and tie. Around the middle fasten 3 or 4 slices of bacon pinned securely with toothpicks. Loosen frankfurters a little at top. Place in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) for about 20 minutes. Remove carefully to a hot platter. Serve with tomato sauce, if desired.

Bread Dressing

3/4 pound pork, ground
3/4 cup grated onion
2 frankfurters, sliced
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon poultry seasoning
1/2 teaspoon pepper
1 loaf bread, finely diced
1 egg

Brown ground pork and onions. Add remaining ingredients and enough moisture to hold dressing together. Mix thoroughly.

3-YEAR SURVEY SHOWS
SLUM CLEARING NEED

A three-year property survey conducted by the WPA in 33 Indiana cities and towns revealed "great needs for slum clearance and amazing widespread run-down conditions and lack of sanitary facilities in dwelling units," John K. Jennings, State WPA head, said today.

Results of the survey now are available to State and local housing commissions and the public, Mr. Jennings announced.

The survey sought to learn the type, age, crowding, and sanitary facilities of homes.

SNETHEN HEADS BOARD

Edward O. Snethen has been elected president of the board of trustees of the Indiana School for the Blind. Other officers are Albert Stump, vice president; F. B. Ransom, secretary, and J. O. Meredith, treasurer.

The trustees voted unanimously for the retention of Robert Lambert as superintendent.

'Grown Up Youth' Style Merger

These school frocks are youthful enough to meet with mother's approval yet grown-up enough to make daughter happy. The green and red plaid shirtwaist model (left) has a slide fastener and leather belt. The princess frock (right) is checked sheer wool with wood buttons and a white linen collar.

School Outfits Please Mothers And Daughters

By MARIAN YOUNG

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—The classroom outfits of smart little girls are miniature replicas of the costumes their older sisters took to college.

From classic sweaters and pleated skirts to beautifully tailored plaid wool dresses, there is a studied nonchalance about school togs.

Furthermore, the modern mother plans Miss Ten-Year-Old's wardrobe as carefully as her own. Little daughter's dresses are chosen with her fall and winter coat colors firmly in mind. Her skirts generally are darkish while sweaters, separate wool blouses and accessories are colorfully gay.

Children love slide-fastener trimmings, and, of course, unusual buttons, buckles and the like. However, the smartest clothes for youngsters are essentially simple with only an occasional decorative gadget. Shirtwaist and beautifully cut princess frocks—these are headlined for school and play. Even Sunday and party dresses are interesting because of fabric and line rather than ruffles and frills.

New and sure to encourage a child to wear her raincoat when she should, are printed rain capes and coats. Made by famous manufacturers of dresses for little tots, the designs were conceived by children for children. One print, appropriately called "Rainy Day," shows little ducks paddling through the rain and holding tiny umbrellas over their heads. This material is made up in capes, coats with capes and plain coats—all with rain hats and umbrellas to match.

Designers have done a really good job with dresses and coats for the 12-year-old who is too young for clothes in the junior misses' departments but who can't bear children's clothes any longer. These are cut to conceal the flat spots on her figure, are youthful but not babyish. They satisfy her personal desire to look more grown-up and her mother's ideas of what is and what isn't in good taste for one so young.

25-TO-75-CENT BOOST WAITED IN COAL PRICES

Minimum Prices Expected To Be Fixed at Mine After Nov. 1.

Indianapolis coal consumers today were warned by Richard W. Tubbs, Indianapolis Retail Coal Merchants' Association president, that fuel prices may be raised between "25 to 75 cents a ton next month."

The warning also was given last night by Kline L. Roberts, Chicago, executive vice president of the American Retail Coal Association, at a meeting of dealers in the Hotel Lincoln.

The Federal Bituminous Coal Commission has divided the nation into districts and commissioners now are at work at mines reclassifying grades of coal in preparation for price-fixing next month, Mr. Tubbs said.

According to Mr. Roberts, minimum prices are to be fixed at the mine. Approximate date for the increase in cost of coal is between Nov. 1 and 15.

Higher Costs Cited

Anticipated increases in freight rates and labor costs also are expected to add to the final cost for the consumer, Mr. Roberts explained.

"Prices will vary on different coal grades, but one mine operator told me he believed the tonnage increase might run between 25 and 75 cents. Of course no one knows what the Commission will fix as a minimum price," Mr. Tubbs said.

Last night's meeting was attended by Indiana Retail Coal Merchants Association members as well as the 80 members of the local association.

FRUIT TO BE TICKET

Queen Esther Chapter 3, Order of Eastern Star, is to hold its annual "fruit of the home" entertainment at 8 p. m. tomorrow in the Masonic Temple.

Admission is to be a jar of fruit, which will be donated to the Masonic Home at Franklin. Mrs. Ernest Brown is general chairman. Edith Fish is in charge of the program.

SALES CHIEFS TO MEET

The Indianapolis Sales Executives Council, a newly formed organization, is to meet Monday night in the Indianapolis Athletic Club to elect officers, adopt bylaws and hold a roundtable discussion on salesmanship.

Other speakers included Broderick Elsey, Citizens Gas & Coke Utility acting board chairman; W. D. Hamerstick, Associated Employers; R. R. Blair, Kiwanis Club president; Frederick E. Schortemeier, Indianapolis Salvation Army board of directors chairman, and Merle Siderer of the Better Business Bureau.

C. D. Alexander, Chamber of Commerce board of directors member, presented Mr. Dithmer with a specially prepared book in behalf of the civic clubs and agencies in which he has served as director and president.

RAIL OUTING IS PLANNED

The Pennsylvania Railroad has arranged a "vagabond vacation" for Oct. 17, company officials announced today. The trip is to include stops at Vincennes, Brooklyn, Gosport and Romona, with visits to factories and points of interest. The Indianapolis Railroad Fans' Association is sponsor.
