his words had been broadcast throughout the Empire. The police dragged him to his feet and held him erect, still gagging him. The notes of the "Last Post"—The British Taps—sounded. There was an angry murmur from the crowd, then a roar, and there was a press inward toward the Cenotaph. Police rushed the disturber across to Little Downing St., later to a police station, and then to the London Council Institution for observation.

Land Mine Explodes At Dublin Castle

DUBLIN, Irish Free State, Nov. 11 (U. P.).—A land mine exploded at Dublin Castle today destroying the royal coat of arms over the doorway of an annex. Authorities suspected a plot to blow up the entire castle had originated after a public meeting which protested "Imperialism."

Windows were shattered and shopfronts damaged in a radius of a quarter of a mile around the ancient castle.

Police were stationed near all damaged buildings, many of which were in a dangerous state and near collapse. No arrests were made.

Duke, Rebuffed, Stays in Hotel

PARIS, Nov. 11 (U. P.).—The Duke of Windsor spent Armistice morning in his hotel today after canceling plans to attend memorial services at St. George's Church and the Armistice Day parade of the French Army.

He declined President Lebrun's invitation to sit in the Presidential tribune to watch the parade because he feared his presence and that of his American-born Duchess might embarrass the British or French Governments.

He stayed away from the ceremony at St. George's because the British chaplain, the Rev. J. L. C. Dart, has announced publicly a few hours before.

"Reports that I shall not permit the Duke to attend the service are untrue. I am not particularly keen about his coming but I certainly have no objection. He asked that a place be reserved for him and it will be."

'War's Almost Over!' Veteran Recalls How Armistice Beat His Own Report; Adventured Behind German Lines

Tom Wilson . . . rolls his own.

Tom Wilson, Alone, Tells Of Army Life in Foreign Lands.

By JOE COLLIER

Right now Tom Wilson is keeping bachelor quarters with a tiny yellow kitten and with a dog that snores in his sleep. Next spring he intends to put out a garden. Meanwhile including today—he is living as a caretaker of a small patch of land near Ben Davis on a $30 a month Federal pension.

Today and every day he wears a campaign hat, Army ball cap and high top boots. His handkerchief mustache repeats the deep crescent lines in his rather gaunt face. He sighs a good deal. "I don't like to talk about my experiences as a soldier," he says, "because sometimes I get mixed up in the dates. But come in and sit down."

Entered Army in 1904
Tom, who is 57, started his service record in 1904 and since then has been more or less in the Army or near it until 1919 when he was mustered out as a second lieutenant. He rose from the ranks—the hard way.

He has seen service for the U. S. in Cuba and other tropical countries, in Russia and in France. He has had tropical diseases and once was delirious for more than 40 days in illness. But he didn't get a scratch during the World War.

On Armistice Day in 1918 he was on duty at the front. Fact is, he was just about to report to his superior officer that the war was nearly over—then he heard it was over. He made the report anyway.

This is how it happened:
"On the night of Nov. 8," he said in a sort of drawl that was retched out by deep sighs, "I was in an airplane about 30 miles behind the German lines. My pilot and I were looking for a flashlight signal from the ground and pretty soon we caught it and landed."

Posed as German
"I met a Frenchman who was a German Army officer. First time I ever saw him in my life. I was dressed in a German officer's uniform. We, the Frenchman and I, left."

The next day we talked to German Army men as the Frenchman said. That is he talked, and I had a bandage over my face as though wounded and couldn't talk.

"We saw German soldiers break their guns over cart wheels and start back across the Rhine. We told them they couldn't win and we found they were demoralized."

"That night, the next day and the next night we spent talking to people, skipping from here to there, demanding billets in German homes at night as all German officers did."

"We were held in awe as were all German officers, by the civilians. We bumped into an Indo-Chinese, who had been captured, and was being used by the Germans as a truck driver. We found a German captain who had ceased his military command after they killed the other officers, and who wanted to get into the Allied lines for safety."

Crosses No-Man's Land
"We disposed of the load the truck had and headed back the night of Nov. 10 to the Allied lines. We crawled across no-man's land, and within sight of the British trenches I stripped off my German uniform and exhibited my American uniform. We entered the lines. That was 9:30 a. m."

"We got something to eat. I wrote out my report and had just headed for the General Headquarters. Then I heard the French yelling that the war was over. Firing had ceased and the silence was a novelty."

"I made my report anyway. Mr. Wilson stopped. He pulled out the makings and began to roll a cigarette. He pushed back the campaign hat to lick the paper. He stuck a frayed end in his mouth and lighted it.

"Were you thrilled at the Armistice?"
"Nope, can't say as I was," he replied. A photographer's flash went off and he ducked. Then he laughed.

"I'm so used to ducking flashes that I do it instinctively," he said. "Not nervous, you understand."

Tom said he was going to the American Legion ball tonight, and he's worried over how to sell the five tickets they sent him to sell.

"That ought to be a good dance," he said. Then he invited his guests to come back some time for a sort of cider. He picked up the yellow kitten and was stroking it in his little house the cookstove fire into which he threw the tiny butt of his frayed cigarette.

Duce's Son Finds
War Inksome
ROME, Nov. 11 (U. P.).—Friends of the Mussolini family revealed today that Bruno Mussolini, who is in Majorca as a flier for the Spanish Insurgents, has written to Rome complaining about the orders of his immediate superiors which are keeping him inactive.

It was learned that the strictest instructions have been sent to Majorca that Bruno is not to risk falling into the hands of the Spanish Loyalists, or to expose his life in any day-devil flight.

Bruno therefore is compelled to spend his time mostly smoking cigarettes or playing bridge. His friends expect him to return shortly to Rome, disappointed in the lack of thrill of his Spanish war venture.

and to our markets, and was acquired at a price far below the cost of erecting similar buildings today. "The thing the new plant is only one step in adjusting property holdings to the trends of the business. While we recently sold an unneeded office building in Detroit, we acquired the Indianapolis plant so that Stewart-Warner can continue its healthy growth."

7000 Are Employed

The local plant is to be the fifth manufacturing unit of Stewart-Warner and subsidiary companies. Their plants now occupy a total of 50 acres of land and have aggregate floor space in excess of 2,200,000 square feet. More than 7000 persons are employed, Mr. Otis said.

Principal products are refrigerators, radios, Alemtie lubricating oils, and lubricants, automobile parts, speedometers, gauges and other instruments, as well as furniture hardware. It has a large export trade, officials added.

Aiding in the negotiations are representatives of Indianapolis' Chamber of Commerce, headed by Myron E. Green, industrial commissioner. He praised co-operation given by the liquidating trustees of the Marmion Co.

been useless, though originally it was conceived as a means of creating a market for the mortgages that would speed the movement of capital into housing.

Another proposed change discussed at the White House is designed to facilitate investment in small homes selling for $3000, $4000 and $5000, and would be achieved by increasing the insurance on mortgages for such small homes from 80 to 90 per cent of assessed valuation.

Discussion at the White House conference revolved largely about these two proposed changes in the law. The construction, banking and financial representatives present expressed the belief they would open up a wide field for housing investment.

No one present ventured to suggest the total amount of money that might be released for housing through modification of the FHA act, but it was generally agreed the sum would be considerable.

Consideration of the conference was limited to private housing.

To Broaden Scope
The group which met President Roosevelt will continue its conferences and is expected to broaden the scope of its discussion to include numerous other plans being considered to stimulate housing, among which are:

1. Modification of the capital gains tax to provide an exemption for housing profits, and thus free funds for investment.

2. Authorization for national mortgage associations to initiate the financing of housing instead of merely acting as marketing agencies.

3. Reopening of FHA loans for modernization and repairs. This authority expired in April.

4. Pressure in Congress for a constitutional amendment to prevent issuance of tax-exempt bonds with the object of closing this avenue of investment in the future so that funds would be funneled into other avenues, including housing.

Important business figures present at the conference yesterday were Gen. Robert E. Wood, president of Sears-Roebuck; Gerard Swope, president, General Electric; Harry C. Turner, president, Turner Construction Co., N. Y.; S. Sloane Colt, New York banker.

The Government conferences were headed by Mortimer S. Eccles, Federal Reserve Board Chairman; J. Matthew Daiger, special assistant to the Reserve Board; Isador Lubin, head of the Labor Department's Bureau of Statistics and Research; and Edward F. McGrady, former Assistant Secretary of Labor, now handling labor relations for RCA.

M'NUTT CONSIDERS WASHINGTON VISIT

MANILA, P. I., Nov. 11 (U. P.).—American High Commissioner Paul V. McNutt, former Governor of Indiana, is considering a visit to Washington early next year for a conference with President Roosevelt, he disclosed today.

Commissioner McNutt did not reveal the reason for his visit but it was believed to be connected with the recent report of the Joint Preparatory Commission which has been conducting hearings locally in connection with Commonwealth President Manuel Quezon's plea for early independence.

Site for Proposed Industrial Unit

This is the Marmion No. 2 plant for which Stewart-Warner Corp. is completing negotiations.

Indianapolis: A. A. Anderson, president of the Hayes Body Co. of Grand Rapids, Mich., and H. H. Davidson, manager of the Automotive Credit Service, Inc., of Detroit, offered every consideration possible, Mr. Green said.

Termed Local Compliment
"They are performing a valuable service not only for the beneficiaries of their trust, but for the City of Indianapolis in the manner in which they are conducting the negotiations," he added.

Mr. Green also said that many public officials, representatives of utilities and professional groups had assisted in bringing the new manufacturing plant to Indianapolis. He interpreted Stewart-Warner's decision to operate here as complimentary to local conditions.

Mayor Boetcher said he was delighted to know of Stewart-Warner's plans.

"I have met the company officials," he said, "and I have assured them of the willingness of the City Administration to co-operate in every way possible. I intend to give the matter my personal attention. This will be an excellent new industry for Indianapolis and its activities will add greatly to our total payrolls and to the city's general business volume."

BOB BURNS Says:

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 11.—

There've been so many women suing their husbands for divorce on grounds of cruelty that I began to wonder where all the brutes were comin' from. I figured it wasn't safe to go out with so many of 'em walkin' the streets. The other day I heard that one of them divorce cases was comin' up in court and I went down just to see what kind of a lookin' monster the husband was. When the case was called, a great big woman got up and walked up to the judge's stand and she says, "Judge, I can't live with that man another minute and I want a divorce." The judge says, "On 'what grounds?" And she says, "Cruel, inhuman treatment." The judge says, "Is your husband here to contest the case?" And she says, "I should say not!"

2 HELD IN ALLEGED GOLD THEFT HERE

One man was held on grand larceny charges and another on charges of receiving stolen goods today in connection with the alleged theft of $2340 in gold optical merchandise.

Eugene Long, 27, of 5017 W. 13th St., was bound over to the Marion County Grand Jury under $1000 bond, charged with stealing gold appliances from the Paramount Optical Co., 35 Monument Circle. Police said Long had confessed.

At the same time, Edward Yarling, 36, of 138 N. Illinois St., was slated on charges of receiving the stolen gold. Police reported Yarling said he paid $900 for the merchandise.

Most of the gold had been taken from rims of eye glasses, police said.
