Rubins Does Some Sculpturing

David Rubins

His Work Will Adorn Motor Entrance to Federal Building

By JOE COLLIER

A sculptor is a boss and does almost no sculpture himself, personally.

What he does is make a clay model of what he wants sculptured and how he wants it sculptured and then he comes to a full stop. (This is on architectural figures only, where sculpting in limestone is so deep in places and so extensive that it's practically mining.)

When the clay model is made, some one else casts it into plaster of paris as a working model. When the plaster of paris model is done, still different persons cut it into stone.

It seems as easy as saying: "Miss Jones, take a statue!" But it isn't.

Take David Rubins, for instance.

He thought and thought.

Last fall Mr. Rubins was commissioned by the U. S. Treasury Department to do pieces to crown the motor entrance to the new Federal Building here.

He thought about it all fall. He thought about it that winter. The space and proportion allotted were not suitable for orthodox architectural figures. So he devised something different.

First he made drawings. Then he modeled the drawings into clay. Then, except for supervision, his physical work stopped.

Dante Gaspari, who has the only casting shop for sculptures in Indianapolis, cast it into plaster of paris. That's where it is today.

Within a week or so stone cutters will begin their work of putting the design—which consists of the most intricate measurements and multiplications you can get this side of Purdue University—on rock.

Mr. Rubins is professor of sculpture at the John Herron Art Institute. He has done things for buildings in Washington and every time he visits there he goes to see one of the seated figures on the Archives Building. He did the figure and he goes to see it to see if he still likes it.

Now, Take France

Mr. Rubins is glad the U. S. Treasury Department has, at last, taken an interest in the Nation's art to the extent of giving it tangible support in the form of money. France, he points out, has done so for many years and for many years France has been doing all right in the art world.

Almost any day Mr. Rubins can be seen in professional apron carving a 16th of an inch off here or a 32d of an inch off there.

He does his own chipping and cutting on museum pieces. Mr. Rubins believes that the stone cutters will have the Federal Building decorations done within three months.

He will look in on them a couple of times a week because he is responsible for the finished work. The stone cutters are under contract to him, not the Government.

HOUSING CHIEF MAY ASK EXTRA 500 MILLIONS

Much Slum Work Remains
To Be Done, Straus Says
In Speech.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13 (U. P.).—Well-informed sources said today that the United States Housing Authority would ask Congress for possibly another $500,000,000 to finance slum-clearance and low-rent housing construction.

The plan to continue the program at present high speed was disclosed as Administrator Straus told the National Association of Housing Officials at the opening session of its convention that "much work is yet to be done."

With only $75,000,000 remaining available from the $300,000,000 Congress authorized to lend local housing authorities from the proceeds of bond sales, applications exceeding the funds already have piled up.

One Year in Office

Mr. Straus is preparing to ask Congress also to remove from the act a technicality which prevents him from earmarking $70,000,000 of the funds thus far available, it was learned.

On his first anniversary as director of the Government's large-scale public housing venture, Mr. Straus told the assembled officials of local and State housing authorities that 37,000,000 people already live in communities which have established authorities eligible for Federal funds.

Eight million live in large communities in states which have no housing authority legislation and twelve million live in such communities which have no authorities although their State laws permit their establishment, he said.

Sees Aim Fulfilled

"Today we see that the primary aims of the program is being fulfilled," he said. "The rents to be charged in all of the 83 housing projects which have been approved by the President and are now under way will be within reach of those families which desperately need better housing—families with incomes of $400 or $500 to $1,000."

USHA officials, surprised by the speed and volume of applications, said further study would be necessary to determine just how much additional money Congress will be asked for.

Last spring Mr. Straus asked Congress for $500,000,000—over the Administration's recommendation for a smaller sum—to supplement the $500,000,000 in bonds he was authorized to sell by the 1937 Wagner-Steagall Housing Act, which established USHA. He received $300,000,000.

First Lady Can Suit Self About Curtsey to Queen

LONDON, Oct. 13 (U. P.).—Great Britain's experts on international etiquette got together today on the question of whether Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt should curtsy to Queen Elizabeth if they met in America—and decided that the United States' First Lady should "suit herself."

Many questions of precedent and official status were weighed by the experts as they debated the probable result of Mrs. Roosevelt's statement that she would do whatever the State Department told her to do. But the conclusion reached was that all the State Department experts can report is that she will have to make up her own mind.

One thing appeared certain: Nobody is going to expect America's First Lady to curtsy if she decides otherwise, regardless of the fact that Mrs. Albert Lebrun, wife of the President of France, dropped a neat curtsy when she met the Queen on their Majesties' visit to Paris.

The experts said that what Mrs. Roosevelt should do boiled down to the relative status of herself and Queen Elizabeth. Mrs. Roosevelt's official status as the wife of the President will be that of "consort of the head of a country" while the status of the Queen will be that of "a distinguished visitor."

Thus the President's wife would not be expected to curtsy in greeting the distinguished visitor from England. All other ladies to be presented, however, would be expected to curtsy. That would include the President's daughter, Mrs. Anna Boettiger.

If the President meets the royal couple, the procedure calls for Mr. Roosevelt to take the initiative and advance to greet the King and Queen. He would shake hands with both and then Mrs. Roosevelt would greet them. All ladies and gentlemen present, including the President and his wife, would first address the visitors as "Your Majesty" but thereafter merely say "sir" or "madam."

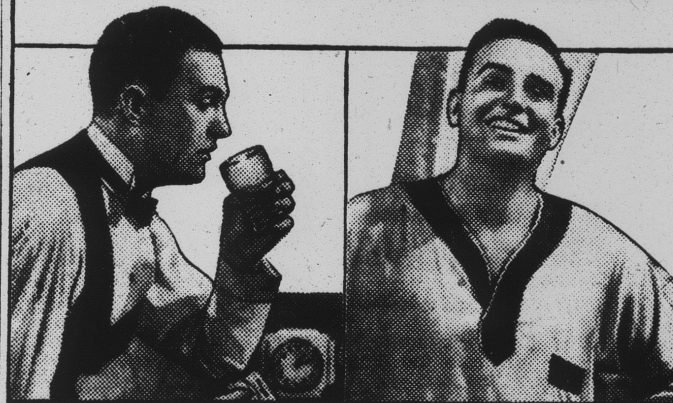

GRAND JURY TO OPEN SHIDELER & CO. QUIZ

First witnesses in the investigation of affairs of Shideler & Co., Inc., investment firm, will be called before the Grand Jury tomorrow, Deputy Prosecutor Henry O. Goett announced today.

William A. Shideler, president of the firm, and his father are being held in the County Jail in default of $10,000 bonds each on charges of false pretense pending in Municipal Court.

Several witnesses testified in Circuit Court Tuesday during hearing on a receivership suit against the company that they invested large sums of money with the firm and received only a small per cent of interest.
