Suggests Play As Crime Cure

"When we work, we make a living, but when we play, we make a life," Judge Wilfred Bradshaw of the Marion County Juvenile Court told members of the Indianapolis Council of Parents and Teachers at their opening meeting of the season this morning in the Meridian Heights Presbyterian Church. Judge Bradshaw's subject was "Recreation As a Crime Prevention."

Although mankind always has sought release from work, he has not learned how to use his leisure time intelligently, according to the speaker. In this use of leisure time lies the cultural, social, spiritual and economic future of America, he stated.

Programs Planned

"There are two classes of parents, those who are playmates to their families and those who are strangers. The family which plays together, stays together," Judge Bradshaw said.

Recreation centers now are planned for the whole families and progressive educators these days are stressing the importance of training for an avocation as well as for a vocation.

A well-planned recreational program is justified if for no other reason than that it is one of the best deterrents of juvenile delinquency. The lack of recreational facilities is not the cause of juvenile delinquency, but it is an important contributing factor."

Luncheon to Follow

Following the talk by Judge Bradshaw, the council is to hold its luncheon at the church. Guests are to include Dewitt S. Morgan, superintendent of Indianapolis schools; D. T. Weir and Virgil Stinebaugh, assistant superintendents; W. A. Evans, safety director of the public schools; the Rev. Sidney Blair Harry, pastor of the host church; Mesdames Clayton Ridge, S. M.
