

SIGNIFICANCE OF FLAG DAY CITED

Legion Head Urges Observance Tomorrow With Deep Appreciation.

Americans should celebrate the birthday of our flag tomorrow with deeper appreciation of the human and spiritual values which our star-spangled banner represents, Raymond Grider, 12th District Commander of the American Legion, said today.

"Our flag today radiates like a beacon of hope and refuge from the last stronghold of liberty and peace in a world gone mad with hatred and intolerance," he said.

"Our flag stands for everything that is precious in the life of an American today—his right to live his life freely, to worship his God, to speak his mind, to read and write as he pleases, to work where he wants, to decide for or against a given thing and to stand by that decision, and to enjoy all these privileges without compulsion."

Open Air Band Concerts Are Mrs. Elliott's 'Thank You' for Happiness Life Has Brought

Probably Won't Hear Them Because She Dislikes Summer Heat.

Mrs. Anna S. Elliott, music patron . . . holding a first edition of David Copperfield, which is a prized possession.

For years she has been interested in all of the musical organizations in the community and for 32 years has been on the Board of Directors of the Althenheim Home for the Aged at 20th St. and Capitol Ave.

Robert C. Elliott, president of the Standard Dry Kilm Co., and Edward J. Elliott, secretary-treasurer, are her sons, and Mrs. Victor Jose, 410 N. Audubon Road, is her daughter.

Mrs. Elliott probably will not be here to listen to the concerts she occupied with the achievements of her children and grandchildren.

Mrs. Elliott probably will not be here to listen to the concerts she financed because she doesn't like mid-summer heat in Indianapolis. But she has a tremendous urge to help select the programs, because she has some tried and true favorites.

Actually, Mrs. Elliott's love of music probably came from little twilight summer music sessions with her father, a professional violinist, back in her Louisville childhood.

"When it came twilight," she recalls, "and we were all tired from play, father would gather the three of us children around him. I was the youngest and I would sit on his lap. The others would sit at his feet."

"Then he would play for us and teach us little songs."

PHONE RATE CUT SCHEDULE FILED

New Long Distance Charges Expected to Save Users

$300,000 a Year.

A petition seeking approval of a revised schedule of intra-state long distance telephone rates, which would effect an estimated saving of $300,000 a year to Indiana telephone users, was filed today with the Public Service Commission by the Indiana Bell Telephone Co.

The revised schedule, if approved by the Commission, would go into effect July 1.

The filing of the petition providing for reduced long distance rates followed several weeks of negotiations between the Public Service Commission and the telephone company.

Reductions Outline

The proposed rates for day-time service would bring reductions ranging from five cents to 40 cents on the three-minute "initial periods" of person-to-person toll calls involving distances from 40 to 338 miles. Reductions of from five cents to 25 cents would be made on "station-to-station" calls for distances ranging from 91 to 338 miles.

Reductions for night and Sunday service on "station-to-station" calls would range from five to 10 cents on distances over 100 miles, while for person-to-person calls the night and Sunday rates would be reduced from five to 30 cents on distances more than 64 miles.

The proposed rates also include reductions in the cost of additional minutes of conversation in excess of the three-minute initial periods.

Follows Federal Lead

The schedule is in line with a Federal Government program for intra-state long distance telephone toll rates, commission officials said.

The proposed rates also would affect long distance calls between exchanges of the Indiana Bell System and connecting independent telephone companies in the state.

In addition, it was said that large savings would result to customers of the independent companies using long distance service in which the Indiana Bell Co. does not participate because many such companies have patterned their rates after the Indiana Bell Co.

DENIES POLITICS IN SELECTION OF PARK WORKERS

Middlesworth Says Eleven Were Hired at Last Minute.

H. W. Middlesworth, City Recreation Director, today denied any summer playground worker had been selected on a "political basis."

He said, however, that at least 11 young men who were named playground directors did not attend the four-months' training course provided by the Park Department.

Mr. Middlesworth disclosed that because of a lack of trained personnel he was forced to choose those 11 "at the last minute," that all of them are college men, and that all took examinations.

Examination of the records disclosed today that several of the 11 made lower than 60 points on the 100-point examination. Mr. Middlesworth said simply that he was forced to accept all of them because of a lack of candidates.

Of the original 65 taking the Department's training course, 19 dropped out for various reasons, and Mr. Middlesworth said he found it necessary to appeal to universities and colleges throughout the state to recruit men. This resulted in the 11 who applied. These persons were not named until after 11 men resigned at the end of the course or shortly after their official appointments.

In denying that any political considerations entered into the selection of any playground workers, Mr. Middlesworth said that most of the appointees "probably" had their applications signed by politicians.

"I suppose they thought they had to have recommendations from the politicians," he said.

"It is my belief that the Junior Chamber of Commerce in each community can be helpful by collecting and making public information regarding local unemployment," Mr. Smith said.

"If the public in each locality is aware of the extent of its unemployment, it seems reasonable to assume that a better solution to the problem will be eventually reached."

Mr. Smith has proposed that a test city be chosen to try out his plan before it is undertaken on a national scale.

A proposal by Mr. Smith that each community assume "full responsibility" for its unemployment problem, will be presented to the committee.

"It is my belief that the Junior Chamber of Commerce in each community can be helpful by collecting and making public information regarding local unemployment," Mr. Smith said.
