CONTENTS POWERS OF SPEAKER SURRENDERED

By Raymond H. Stone

The Constitution of the United States provides two offices of Speaker of the House. One is the office of Chief Executive. The main office is that of Speaker of the House.

During the past seven years the Speaker of the House has surrendered basic powers to the President.

The electorate in 1940 can and should elect members of the House of Representatives who will regain those powers for the Sepaker of the House.

It is just as necessary that this be done as to concern ourselves with world politics.

TERMS COURAGE BEST POLITICAL ASSET

By Claude Braddock

Doubtless a great many politically trained people will smile knowingly at my amateurish insistence that political courage can be a candidate's greatest asset. Political preference, they will say, is not so easy as that. It requires finesse, a delicate balancing of this against that, equivocation, generalization, and so on and so on.

Well, I am an amateur. But I do not yield the point. Numerous instances might be cited; but here is one that is both outstanding and fresh: Senator Hiram Johnson of California follows no one who isn't going his way. He knows to no groups, cliques or parties. He never has. Recently President Roosevelt (who is popular in California) said of him that he "no longer to be considered a liberal" and urged his defeat. What happened? Johnson entered the Democratic Republican and Progressive primaries and won all three!

If Wendell Willkie is defeated it will not be because of his courage and forthrightness, the qualities that made him a candidate. If chargeable to him at all, it will lie at the door of his apparent lack of consistency, or man-in-the-street clearness, which inevitably causes confusion and leads many to doubt his stability, if not his vaunted sincerity.

TERMS TEA PARTY FIRST 'NEW DEAL'

By Wm. Leman

America's first New Deal was in colonial times at the Boston Tea Party and since then our country has progressed and thrived on New Deals. Hoover continued the Old Deal from 28 until 32 with banks going under and poverty and suicides all over the nation.

Automobiles and modern machinery are New Deals, interurbans replaced by buses and everything minor given a New Deal, but the people have not adjusted their work to conform with the rapid pace of modern inventive genius. They must solve the problem of distribution and find work to create purchasing power.

Capital claiming too much government interference has been on a strike, yet the business turnover is five times greater now than in '33. Organized labor must have government protection or else return to the Old Deal of industrial slavery.

The New Deal has made few mistakes but this is outnumbered by its successes, with laws protecting the farmer and labor and our secure and safe banking laws. Success comes only by "taking uncharted seas." The New Deal can't be so bad or else the Republicans would not have copied it, even to securing its major candidate for the Democratic Party.

BRANDS THIRD TERM AS MINOR ISSUE

By E. B.

In this quadrennial campaign to elect our choice for President it is distressing to note how much undue emphasis is laid upon such minor questions as the brands and how little stress is laid upon major and more fundamental questions such as unemployment.

I am patiently waiting for Mr. Willkie to give us the lowdown on "I will give you jobs" and stop talking in generalities. I notice, however, that Mr. Willkie promises the continuance of a dole to the unemployed and further aid to the farmers.

As an opponent of the "New Deal" who does he promise the continuance of its main distinguishing features. I can understand our duty to continue aid to the unemployed because they are the victims of our Government's responsibility in failing to establish a more scientific economic system. But because of Mr. Willkie's vehement criticisms of the industrial workers to pay, and also in higher taxes for business to pay for these bonuses.

The entire political career of Franklin D. Roosevelt has been one of devotion to the amelioration of economic conditions for the underprivileged and the abolition of privileged practices. He may not have always seen the basic form through which privilege operates, and which is the direct cause of our millions of unemployed and the problems related thereto. But neither does Mr. Willkie know, or if he does he has not disclosed the fact, "I will give you jobs" sounds too much like demagoguery!

STANDS BY WPA DESPITE HARDSHIPS

By Ernest Morton, Secretary Workers Alliance

A few remarks concerning the article of Mr. Maddox in the Forum (10-7-40). You are absolutely correct Mr. Maddox about WPA workers. I am one of them so I should know.

The outside workers often work in bitter cold or pelting rain. Seldom do they have proper food, fuel, clothing, or shelter. (Mr. Meitzler of Attica please note). Neither can they always afford proper transportation to and from work. Theirs is a very hard lot. Their family life is equally hard.

Contrary to popular belief, the WPA worker must do a fair and reasonable day's labor or get off the job. He earns all the pay he gets and more. Because his job is uncertain he cannot buy anything except for cash. No matter how honest he can prove himself to be his credit is no good in the larger stores.

However, we offer the years of 1931-32 as a monument to the memory of government by Wall Street interests. In those years we had no WPA. We stood in line at the trustee's office in the cold and rain. We did without proper food, fuel, housing, clothing, etc. We were quite often thrown out of our homes into the streets regardless of the weather, treated worse than stray animals. Hunger marchers were murdered in cold blood, shot down in the streets of Washington, D. C., on orders from the President. We can't seem to forget those things Mr. Maddox, so we won't leave the New Deal till the opposition offers us something better.
