

Great Team (Notre Dame) Usually Beats a Great Player (Bosch)

By J. E. O'BRIEN

THE SHADOWS in the Notre Dame Stadium were getting deeper and the 50,000 fans were getting a bit wearier as Johnny Bosch, Georgia Tech's No. 46, asked the referee for readmittance to the game.

Johnny was limping now on a sore leg. And his jersey, stained with perspiration and whitened with chalk, was evidence that already he had done a good afternoon's football work. But Georgia Tech was needing a touchdown and needing it quickly—and Johnny is the guy Georgia Tech is accustomed to call on in such a situation.

At that, Tech's hopes were way too high. Notre Dame was leading 26-13, and even with this Bosch-made touchdown, it would have required a near-miracle to get another in the remaining seconds. But somehow football teams never like to think such thoughts.

Anyway, there it was Georgia Tech's ball, first down and 16 yards to go to the Notre Dame goal. Bosch wasted no time—Tech huddled, came out in a hurry, and Johnny bulleted a pass to George Webb to the Notre Dame four. Then he himself squirmed through for another yard and on the next play he laid the ball a yard from the goal.

Anybody could carry it the rest of the way, Georgia Tech's Coach Alex figured, and he recalled Johnny to the bench. On the following play Tech was over and the point was good. But Johnny didn't see this—he was stretched out on the ground while a trainer's educated hand massaged the aching muscle.

This was a much more fatigued, a much more downhearted Johnny Bosch than the Johnny Bosch of the first quarter. Then it was Bosch running back the kickoff, Bosch returning the punts, Bosch throwing the passes or Bosch putting all his 144 pounds into mighty narrow holes at guard or at tackle or trying to rumba away from three or four tacklers.

But even when the Yellow Jackets got to within 24 yards of the goal under Bosch's leadership, you knew things wouldn't stay this way. You couldn't forget that short dozen of Notre Dame first stringers still on the bench awaiting a beckon from Layden. And Layden all the time sitting with quarterback Bob Hargrave like lovers in the park, although Layden was whispering more important things than just sweet nothings.

Neither finally made up his mind. The first-stringers were turned loose, and, after several preliminary thrusts, the main assault started. Georgia Tech was expecting it on the ground, but it came by air, with Boo Saggau's 23-yard pitch to Hargrave climaxing the first touchdown drive.

Two and a half minutes later the Irish had their second. It looked easy. Steve Juzwik took the ball on a reverse and skipped 60 yards down the west sideline while fellows like Hargrave, O'Brien, Lillis and Gubanski dispelled what notions the Georgia Techs had of getting to and grounding Mr. Juzwik.

It was Johnny Bosch who momentarily stopped another Notre Dame touchdown by pushing Saggau outside the legal playing premises after Saggau had gathered in a pass from Bagary. But the touchdown came just the same three plays later.

It would be nice now to report that Johnny Bosch ran a Notre Dame kickoff back for a touchdown. For you'll remember a Notre Dame kickoff was run back for a touchdown, but it was John Hancock who did it—not Bosch—and he picked a path along the western boundary for the tally trek.

The game might just as well have ended there. For Johnny Bosch was tired and he walked on his bad leg with a limp. And you knew Georgia Tech couldn't catch Notre Dame—not while the first-stringers were doing nothing more than just looking on.

Nevertheless they deserved to just sit and look on, for they were much better than they were a week ago. Sharper tackling and blocking made the job simpler for a backfield that doesn't lack anything unless maybe it's a traveling mascot.

As for Georgia Tech—Georgia Tech was Johnny Bosch.

It was a great guy playing a great team—and great teams don't usually lose that kind.

It's the Hurlers and Catchers Who Win on the Pro Grid

Baugh and Filchuck Prove That as They Whip the Chicago Cardinals, 28 to 21

By GEORGE KIRKSEY

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—It's the hurlers and the catchers that win ball games—baseball or football—and on the professional "play-for-pay" gridiron, any club without at least one dead-eye passer and a brace of sticky-fingered receivers hasn't a chance.

This is proved by the National Football League leaders, the Washington Redskins, whose unbeaten record has attracted the largest flock of customers of any professional team thus far this season. In winning four straight games the Redskins have played before a total of 126,379 customers.

Filchuck Stars

Washington put its aerial circus in motion yesterday against the Chicago Cardinals to give the Chicago squad a 28-to-21 trimming. Although the score was close, Sammy Baugh and Frank Filchuck, the Indiana University product, were up-est insurance for the Redskins.

Baugh and Filchuck completed 18 out of 29 passes for 326 yards.

Baugh had a field day, connecting with 12 out of 17 tosses.

The champion Green Bay Packers turned loose their two ace "pitchers," Cecil Isbell and Arnie Herber, to beat the Cleveland Rams 31-14. After an opening period field goal, the Packers scored their four touchdowns through the air.

Bears Score Early to Win

The Chicago Bears, touted as the league's most powerful team on the gridiron, smashed through for a touchdown in the first 86 seconds of play and defeated the Detroit Lions, 7-0, before the day's biggest crowd, 34,217, at Wrigley Field, Chicago. Bill Osman's ripped off tackle for 34 yards and the touchdown. The triumph enabled the Bears to keep pace with the Packers in the West. They are tied for the Western Division lead, each with three victories and one defeat.

After being held scoreless in the first half, the New York Giants drove 74 and 56 yards for a pair of touchdowns in the final half and won in a field goal to triumph over the Philadelphia Eagles, 17-7. It was the Eagles' fifth straight loss.

Jock Sutherland's Brooklyn Dodgers, using substitutes most of the game, rode over the Pittsburgh Steelers, 21-0, before a crowd of 19,468 at Ebbets Field. The Dodgers' variety rushed over two quick touchdowns in the first period and then Dr. Sutherland put on the wraps and sent in the reserves.

Mat Program Completed

A double main event mat program has been completed for tomorrow night at the Armory with the pairing of Sid Marcus, 219, New York, and Al Lovelock, 218, Toronto, for a one-fall opener.

One of the best "heat" tussles of the indoor season is expected when Ray Villmer, 222, young St. Louis wrestling ace, tries for his ninth consecutive local victory. Facing the popular Villmer will be Cowboy Luttrell, 235, one of the outstanding "meats" in the business.

It was Luttrell who gained wide notice when he tried his hand in the fast ring against Jack Dempsey last summer in Atlanta, Ga. The Houston, Tex., powerhouse was flattened in the early rounds. The bout is for two falls out of three.

In the other feature, also for two falls, "Lord" Lansdowne, 179, a colorful matman, takes on the aggressive Tex Riley, 185, of Austin, Tex.

SPORTS ...

By Eddie Ash

FOOTBALL FANS like to win 'em all but if that were the case the operators of grid poles would have to go to work for a living instead of eating big steaks on sucker money.

Grid teams are not the same from Saturday to Saturday and even the best ones have their off weeks while others come from the depths and gain the upper hand.

That's what makes the sport and keeps the turnstiles clicking. Hoosier colleges had just a fair record against out-of-state opponents last Saturday, three winning, four losing, one getting a tie. ... Other games played were Hoosier colleges had just a fair record against out-of-state opponents last Saturday, three winning, four losing, one getting a tie.

In the "picking league" this department had an unusual amount of hard roads to travel and got lost in the wilderness at times while trying to wrestle with 55 games in all sections of the football domain. ... The week's record: 35 winners, 16 losers and four tie tilts.

The record for the season to date: Games picked, 178; winners, 130; losers, 37; tie, 11. ... Battling average over all, 766. No allis are offered and no reprisals threatened. ... This week's games will be tackled as usual. ... If you feel badly about the defeat of your favorite team how about Yale's followers? ... They are bluer than blue.

Boilermakers Struck By Hard Luck

NORTHWESTERN finally busted the Ohio State spell when a Buck player dared throw a pass deep in his own territory while his team was out in front in the fourth quarter. ... It was fatal, but maybe he was taught that way.

Navy evidently had been laying for Princeton by playing under wraps, else the Tigers have got less than the Ohio State and losing two star warriors by injuries, Mike Belyene and Dave Rankin. Rankin is one of the leading candidates for All-America and his chances for that rating may be hurt by being forced to rest up for repairs. ... However, Purdue is idle this week and the Boilermakers are thankful for the breathing spell.

CLEMSON put Wake Forest in its place and Texas teams found the going tough in intersectional tilts. ... North Carolina prevailed over Texas Christian and Southern Methodist was glad to settle for a tie with Pittsburgh. ... And mighty Texas Aggies had to go all out to beat U.C.L.A.

One of the casualties of the Auburn-Tulane game in New Orleans on Oct. 5 was a Tulane cheerleader who broke his arm doing a cartwheel and will be out for the season.

Says Jarring John Tulane Story Is Myth

HORACE RENEGAR, Tulane football publicity chief, says the following story of Jarring John Kimbrough's leaving Tulane to enter Texas A. and M. is a myth. ... Kimbrough was practicing with the Green Wave freshmen and persistently refused to yield to persuasion of various Texans to "come back home."

Finally, one Long Star citizen brought a portable phonograph to the Tulane practice field and played over and over, "The Eyes Of Texas Are Upon You." ... Whereupon Kimbrough gave up and returned to his native land. ... But Renegar repeats it isn't so.

RAY MORRISON not only is the first head coach of Temple University football to have played in the backfield as an undergraduate, but is also the first tutor to have missed participation in the Rose Bowl Classic.

Heinie Miller, Temple's first coach, played for the University of Pennsylvania against Oregon, and Fred Swan, 1939 tutor, was the standout guard for Stanford in the 1925 game against Notre Dame.

Glenn S. (Pop) Warner, who tutored the Owls from 1933 to 1938, was coach of several Stanford teams that played in the Pasadena classic.

Report Bucks In Dissension

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 14 (U.P.).—

Dissension over football practice policies of Coach Francis Schmidt was reported in the Ohio State camp today after the Bucks suffered their initial beating of the season at the hands of Northwestern.

The Columbus Citizen today quoted several players as stating after the game Saturday that they wanted more scrimmage sessions this week before meeting Minnesota.

"We need plenty of hard scrimmaging," one player, whose name was withheld, said. "We need plenty of hard scrimmaging."

"Those Northwestern fellows hit hard and we couldn't stop them," another player was quoted.

Schmidt commented that the 6-3 Northwestern defeat had been a "bad day" and that "we didn't pass enough." Ohio State completed five passes in 21 attempts against the Wildcats.
