

TUG OF WAR ON MONEY POLICY IS IN PROSPECT

Federal Reserve Board and Treasury Apart Over Control of Credit.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2 (U. P.).—President Roosevelt and Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau Jr. today studied the Federal Reserve System's proposal to increase its power over the nation's monetary setup at the expense of the Treasury and the Chief Executive.

Presidential Secretary Stephen T. Early said that the proposal was forwarded to Congress by Federal Reserve Board Chairman Marriner S. Eccles, was made with the "full knowledge" of Mr. Roosevelt. Asked if that meant that the President had approved it, Mr. Early said: "Before he'll give his approval, he'll study it."

Mr. Early also said that the White House had assisted Mr. Eccles in the timing of his proposal which threatens a tug-of-war between the Treasury and the Federal Reserve System.

Under Study—Morgenthau
Meantime, Mr. Morgenthau told a press conference that the Eccles recommendations were "under consideration." He declined further comment.

He did say, however, that he "wouldn't be surprised" if a date were set within the next week for submission to Congress of Treasury proposals to increase the present statutory debt limit of $49,000,000,000 to $65,000,000,000.

The Board's recommendations for repeal of many Treasury and Presidential fiscal powers, including the President's power to devalue the dollar, and its bid for broad power to combat inflationary tendencies may simulate the famous battle in the 1890s between Andrew Jackson and the Bank of the United States.

Fragmentary Congressional reaction—from conservative Senators—favored Mr. Eccles' proposals.

Major Fight Indicated

But there was little doubt that the report would touch off a major controversy in the new Congress convening tomorrow, and that it may become a close second in Congressional debate to the question of greater aid to Great Britain.

A conference the day before the report was released, which was attended by Mr. Morgenthau, Mr. Eccles and Lauchlin Currie, assistant to Mr. Roosevelt and a former Reserve Board economic adviser, was widely interpreted as an attempt by Mr. Morgenthau to have certain revisions made in the board's proposals.

Treasury Opposition Admitted

Although the first conclusion was that Mr. Currie's position was one supporting Mr. Morgenthau, some sources hinted that he quite likely might be in agreement with Mr. Eccles on many points and might be seeking a compromise between the opposing factions.

Treasury officials frankly admitted that they would oppose virtually all of the Reserve Board's recommendations, but considered it proper that the disagreement over basic fiscal policy be brought into the open for discussion.

The Treasury's position was outlined by these officials as follows: The President should retain the right to revalue the dollar for post-war economic emergencies. Some of the fiscal controls the board recommended repealed are not needed now when the Nation's economy is rising toward full capacity, but the trend may shift suddenly and it would be helpful then if the Secretary of the Treasury had the powers which he calls "his shotgun in the closet."

Insists F. D. R. Keep Power

"We are living in a chaotic world," said one Treasury official, "and it is essential that the President hold his monetary authority, which is a powerful economic weapon that may have to be used swiftly when the war is over."

"It's true that the power may not have to be invoked in these days when major world powers have exchange control. But the time element will be important when peace comes and the President will need authority to act quickly."

G. O. P. LEADER IN 23D WARD RESIGNS

The first dissension within the Marion County G. O. P. committee over Chairman James L. Bradford's new system of organization without regular ward chairmen, came to the surface today.

Cary D. Jacobs, 2509 Sangster Ave., who had been appointed ward "representative" for the 23d Ward, resigned, charging that he had been made merely a "figurehead."

In a letter to Mr. Bradford, he stated that when he accepted the appointment as representative he accepted only on the condition that he would be representative in fact as well as name.

"I discovered that my appointment was an empty honor only and that I was in fact a figurehead," Mr. Jacobs' letter stated. "That you have worked around me almost wholly in all of your dealings with the 23d Ward cannot be successfully denied."

Shortly after his election as County Chairman, Mr. Bradford announced that ward chairmanships would be abolished and that in their stead personal representatives of the chairman would be appointed.

The identity of the ward representatives never was made public. Mr. Bradford could not be reached for comment.

MOVIE COLONY GETS SURPRISE

Unaware of Romance With Childhood Suitor, a Dentist's Son.

By FREDERICK C. OTHMAN

United Press Hollywood Correspondent

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 2.—Bette Davis had pulled a fast one on Hollywood's love-and-romance experts today by going on a honeymoon with Arthur Farnsworth, Vermont dentist's son.

The experts didn't even know she was in love with him. They never had heard of him.

They received their first hint of 1941 when Miss Davis dispatched telegrams to news service offices, announcing her marriage to Mr. Farnsworth on New Year's Eve, at the 15,000-acre ranch of Justin Dart near Rimrock, Ariz. Mrs. Dart is the former Jane Bryan, movie star.

Files to Wedding Scene

Miss Davis and a party of her closest friends flew to the ranch from Hollywood. The 34-year-old Mr. Farnsworth flew from the East. The Rev. Robert Price, a Methodist pastor from Glenside, Ariz., read the ceremony, the newlyweds began their honeymoon by automobile, and the wedding party flew back to Hollywood.

Miss Davis and husband will be back in town Monday when she starts a new picture. He's only been in Hollywood once.

It seems Miss Davis had two childhood friends. One was Harmon O. Nelson, who led the band at the Newton, Mass., High School. The other was Mr. Farnsworth. She married Mr. Nelson in 1932.

She was earning $2500 a week and he was a none too successful musician. Two years ago Mr. Nelson filed suit for divorce, making the standard change of cruelty.

Now Him on Vacation

Miss Davis later spent several vacations at a lodge in the White Mountains, at Littleton, N. H. Nobody here knew that Mr. Farnsworth was the manager.

In 1939 Miss Davis made five pictures and then demanded a vacation. She got it and she spent seven months in Franconia, N. H., where she built a house and where she presumably resumed her friendship with the resort manager at nearby Littleton.

She returned to Hollywood last February and built another house in suburbia. There she and Mr. Farnsworth will live—and desist from having breakfast with each other.

Miss Davis once said that the only way to make a marriage work is for husband and wife to breakfast separately and thus not see each other in the morning until they are able to smile.

77TH CONGRESS CHIEFS INVITED TO WHITE HOUSE

Garner Confers Separately With F. D. R.; New Session Opens Tomorrow.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2 (U. P.).—President Roosevelt invited his Congressional lieutenants to an afternoon conference today to discuss some of the momentous problems confronting the first session of the 77th Congress which convenes at noon tomorrow.

The invitation was extended shortly before the 76th Congress met for the final sitting of the longest session in history. The 76th Congress expires automatically when the 77th convenes.

Leaders invited to talk over pressing matters with the President were Speaker of the House Sam Rayburn, House Democratic Leader John W. McCormack, Senate Democratic Leader Alben W. Barkley, Chairman Pat Harrison of the Senate Finance Committee and Senator James P. Byrnes (D, S. C.).

Garner Not Included

Vice President John Nance Garner was not included among the conferees but held a separate meeting with Mr. Roosevelt prior to the get-together. White House Secretary Stephen T. Early said that the Roosevelt-Garner meeting was arranged mutually and was of a general nature.

The Vice President, who had absented himself from the Capitol for several months, returned today from his Uvalde, Tex., home. He planned to remain here until after the third term inauguration on Jan. 20. His term of office expires at that time.

He spent 40 minutes with the President.

"The boss is looking fine," was his only comment.

Madden Only Senate Issue

Only one piece of unfinished business remained for the Senate—confirmation of the appointment by President Roosevelt of J. Warren Madden, former chairman of the National Labor Relations Board, to be a judge of the U. S. Court of Claims. The House has no business scheduled.

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (R, Mich.) has blocked action twice on Mr. Madden's appointment. House Democrats will caucus at 4 p. m. to nominate Speaker Rayburn for another term and to return Mr. McCormack as leader.

House Republicans will meet sometime before the new Congress convenes to name Rep. Joseph W. Martin Jr. as their leader for 1941. In the Senate both parties plan caucuses Saturday.
