

NEW GOVERNOR TO LIST HIS AIDS

Six in Townsend Regime Resign, Including Attorney General Jackson.

By NOBLE REED

A new lineup of State officials will be announced by Henry F. Schricker late today.

Six present State officials, some of whom learned that they would not be reappointed by Mr. Schricker, announced their resignations during the week-end.

They were T. A. Dicus of Swayzee, chairman of the State Highway Commission; Frank E. Finney of Martinsville, chief of the Motor License Bureau; Mark Rodenbeck, assistant chief of the Motor License Bureau; Clifford W. Slifft of Ft. Wayne, member of the State Highway Commission; Marshall Williams, Indianapolis, Democratic member of the State Tax Board, and Attorney General Samuel D. Jackson.

Effective Wednesday

Their resignations will become effective Wednesday when Mr. Schricker's appointments are expected to become effective.

Two others who announced their resignations earlier were Virgil M. Simmons of Bluffton, State Conservation director, and Kenneth M. Kunkel of Bluffton, assistant director of the Conservation Department.

Attorney General Jackson, who had been asked to remain, indicated several days ago that he would not accept reappointment because of his desire to resume law practice in Ft. Wayne. He formally announced his resignation Saturday, effective as soon as a new Attorney General is appointed.

Blumer Mentioned

It was reported that Mr. Schricker was considering George Blumer of South Bend for the Attorney General post. Also State Democratic Chairman Fred F. Bays had been mentioned for the post.

Mr. Jackson was appointed to the office last June to fill out the term of Homer S. Jackson, who died.

Mr. Dicus and Mr. Slifft resigned from the highway posts after they learned that they would not be reappointed. Mr. Dicus did not announce his future plans but Mr. Slifft said he had accepted a post in connection with the Federal works program.

Mr. Finney said he has accepted a post with the National Defense Advisory Commission in charge of work in the Middle West. He also resigned as Seventh District Democratic Chairman and as chairman of the Indiana Commission on Inter-State Co-operation. He had been head of the Motor License Division since 1933.

Will Open Insurance Office

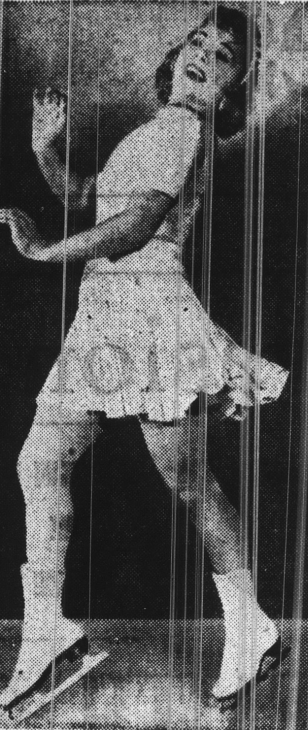

Mr. Rodenbeck said he would open an insurance office here soon.

Mr. Williams said he resigned from the Tax Board to resume law practice in Indianapolis, specializing in tax matters. He has been a member of the Board since April 1, 1937.

Several other State officials were expected to be replaced by Mr. Schricker.

Several of those who resigned had not supported Mr. Schricker at the State Convention last June.

Sonja Henie, who was the talk of the town for about a week here last winter, will return with her Hollywood Ice Revue Jan. 30.

She will give six consecutive shows at the Coliseum, the last being on the night of Feb. 4.

The shows will start at 8:30 p. m. and Sonja herself will skate in seven numbers nightly.

The Coliseum will seat 9000 and tickets will be sold at L. Strauss & Co., with the same prices as last year prevailing.

Sonja is on what will be called a triumphal tour. The Chicago Stadium was sold 10 times for her and all reserved seats were sold at Detroit. At Cleveland it was the same story.

Miss Henie will come here after her engagement in New York.

STRIKE IS SETTLED AT REPUBLIC PLANT

The several months old strike at the Maywood plant of the Republic Creosoting Co. and the Kelly Tar and Chemical Corp. here has been settled, it was announced in a joint statement signed by company and C. I. O. officials.

The statement said the strike "has been settled amicably to the satisfaction of all parties concerned by written agreement." Signers were James C. Robb, Indiana C. I. O. chief, Carlton E. Edwards, general manager of the plant, and George S. Dailey, the company's attorney.

BEYOND THE BROW

There is just a little bit of the wanderlust in most of us—enough to realize our pet diversion, at every opportunity, by driving through Indiana's beautiful countryside, famous for its network of modern highways and, yes, even byways.

We enjoy to the utmost that certain thrill of expectancy upon approaching the brow of a hill or a bend of the road which obscures our vision of what lies beyond. It's human nature to expect too much—so are, sometimes, just a little disappointed not only in the scenery but in the road bed itself. But what a grand and glorious feeling to see more than we expected.

Most of the non-adle inclined have come to realize that the smoothness and durability as well as the non-skid factor of KENTUCKY ROCK ASPHALT surfacing has gone a long way towards helping Indiana achieve the enviable reputation of having such GOOD ROADS.

TEXT OF DAWSON INAUGURAL TALK

'Duty Bound to Lend Best Effort to Improving Government.'

Following is the text of Lieut. Gov. Charles M. Dawson's inaugural address:

I have just been privileged to take the oath of office required by the people of this State from those whom they have chosen as their executives in the government of the State of Indiana.

I am impressed by the solemnity of that oath. I am impressed by the obligation which that oath emphasizes. I am impressed by the duty which the acceptance of that oath places upon me.

To me the oath of office means far more than the mere acceptance of the obligations imposed by law upon any officer of this State. It means far more than fulfillment of the duties which are required by law. To me the acceptance of that oath means that I am duty bound not only to carry out those obligations of office which are fixed by law, but to lend my every effort, my best efforts, toward a continually improving government for the people of my State.

To me that oath means that I am duty bound to strive constantly to bring about new developments in the field of government which will benefit the people of my State.

To me that oath means the selection, insofar as it is within my power to select, of high-grade, conscientious efficient division department heads who know no loyalty other than to the people.

FAITH IS PARAMOUNT

To me that oath means that I am to strive for better and better government. It is a contract, but not a scrap of paper and a scratch of a pen. It is something in which faith is the paramount factor—in which trust is written in bold letters at the beginning.

It is a contract not only binding upon me personally, but upon the party of which I am a member. As a part of that contract I am bound to lend my utmost energies to carry out the platform pledges of my party. For, in those platform pledges is the written part of my contract with the people. I intend to carry out, insofar as I can do so, the written part of that contract—our platform pledges.

That platform was based primarily on the thesis of good government. It called for definite changes in government. It set up certain fixed principles of government. The people read and understood those party platform pledges and elected its officials on that basis.

So, I plan to devote my time, my energies and my judgment toward the program laid down in the Republican platform. I shall be true to those pledges insofar as that is possible in the changing conditions of the world and our State today.

Among those pledges is that of restoration of government in Indiana to the hands of the people. Decentralization must be the method to be followed if this is to be accomplished. My people makes it mandatory that I follow that line of endeavor, and that I shall do.

NO NEW TAXES

My party platform calls for no new taxes, for a reduction wherever possible in state expenditures for government; for a government closer to the people; for the removal of our penal, benevolent and correctional institutions from the realm of political control; for the elimination of politics from those departments dealing with our unfortunate and our sick. These and other platform provisions I shall work for and attempt to carry them to fulfillment.

In conclusion I wish to emphasize one important point: I believe that the best government comes from a people who have as their representatives men and women who know the meaning of the word "co-operation."

We face in this State today a situation unprecedented in recent administrations. It is a matter of fact that condition which results in the Governor of this State being of one political faith and all the other elective officers of an opposite political faith. Immediately after the election and when the results became known many of the people of this State were alarmed by the prospects of continuous strife when the new administration came into existence.

FEAR HAS DIMINISHED

I am pleased to say today, and to believe that those fears have to a large extent been allayed. Those of my political faith have, I am proud to say, soberly and sanely gone forward to develop a program of state government for Indiana which was and is in keeping with their party's pledges to the people. The same sober approach to the problem has appeared in the leadership of the other side. For both I am grateful. We are at a stage, nationally and locally, where all our collective energies must be devoted to co-operative action in the fullest sense, or we head for serious trouble.

Good government to me implies co-operative action.

Text of Governor Schricker's Inauguration Address

Following is the text of Governor Henry F. Schricker's inaugural address at the State House today:

This day marks the beginning of a new administration in the political history of Indiana, and I stand before you with unfeigned humility to assume the responsibilities of the high office of Governor, which a free and noble people have so generously bestowed upon me.

To me it is a day of awe and reverent devotion, and to you, my fellow citizens, I trust it will be a day of earnest prayer and increasing faith in the processes of democratic government.

You are assembled today under the dome of this majestic State House to witness the transfer of executive authority from the hands of one Governor to another, and by your presence pay tribute to him who now retires from this exacting service and also to encourage him who faces the grave and uncharted responsibilities of the future.

Without this wholehearted sympathy and without your sympathetic understanding the strong cords of men might well shrink from the task that lies before us. The spiritual worth and the patriotic unity of our people is the priceless heritage of this hour, and I fervently trust that God will give me the wisdom, the courage and the strength to meet these responsibilities, and thus do my part in preserving the blessings of a free government for our people.

We are reminded again, on this occasion, of the privileges and rare opportunities for unselfish services which have been so carefully woven into the rich tapestry of American citizenship. All of the material wealth of the world fades into insignificance when compared to the process of free government which will elevate a man of simple birth to the high position of Governor of a great and sovereign State.

I welcome this opportunity to take a solemn oath in support of its Constitutional authority and to acknowledge my indebtedness to the venerable founders of our Republic and also to those who have preserved its liberties and opportunities to our own day.

CITES UNUSUAL SITUATION

Thomas Jefferson once declared that "good government exists in jealousy rather than in confidence." How jealous then you and I ought to be in this tragic hour of world disaster to preserve, at any and all costs, those fundamental principles and purposes from which our priceless citizenship derives its strength. These constitute "the stock whence we are hewn," the source of our liberty, the safeguard of our heritage, and the hope of our future.

In entering upon the solemn duties of this office I am not unmindful of the unusual political complexity existing in my immediate official family, neither do I minimize the fact that another important branch of our State Government, the General Assembly, is in complete control of a political party other than my own. This situation has been a matter of speculation and perhaps grave concern, to party leaders and to our people generally since election day.

I freely admit my own anxiety with reference to our future progress under these conditions, but no time have I entertained the slightest doubt concerning the sincere patriotism of any elected official, regardless of politics, neither have I been disturbed by any misgiving that ought but good should come out of our combined efforts in the service for which we were chosen.

You and I, my fellow officials, regardless of politics, have taken the same solemn oath to support both the Constitution of the United States and of the State of Indiana and we stand prepared faithfully and impartially to discharge the duties of our respective offices to which we were elected.

This obligation, above everything else, clear distinct and paramount to the people, and happily furnishes the best and most reliable of platforms upon which to launch our future activities together. It shall be my purpose never to lose sight of the obligation I have taken today.

From this hour, you and I share a joint responsibility, a responsibility that runs directly to the people first, and then to the party to which we owe allegiance. Political parties are important and necessary under our form of government, but you and I will do well to remember that a public office is still a public trust, and that he who serves his country best is he who serves his party best.

The people of Indiana have chosen us for a very definite and important service. Prudence should dictate a willingness in every heart to work to give the people the best government possible. You now my solemn pledge that I shall entertain no other purpose.

TRACES GRANTS OF POWER

All governmental authority in Indiana flows directly from the State Constitution, and I deem it entirely appropriate on this occasion to re-new our acquaintanceship with a few of the more important provisions of this important document.

Section 1 of Article 1, known as the Bill of Rights, draws its inspiration directly from the Declaration of Independence and restates these important truths: "That all power is inherent in the people; and that all free governments are, and of right ought to be, founded on their authority, and instituted for their peace, safety and well being. For the advancement of these ends, the people have, at all times, an inalienable right to alter and reform their government."

In Section 1 of Article 3, our State Constitution recognizes and adopts the Federal principles with respect to the distribution of governmental power. It says: "The powers of government are divided into three separate departments; the legislative, the executive including the administrative, and the judicial; and no person charged with the official duties under one of these departments shall exercise any of the functions of another, except as in this Constitution expressly provided."

In subsequent articles, dealing separately with the respective duties of these three important departments of government, we find the following express grants of delegated power:

First: "The legislative authority of the State shall be vested in a General Assembly, which shall consist of a Senate and a House of Representatives."

Second: "The executive power of the State shall be vested in a Governor. . . . The Governor shall transact all necessary business with the officers of government. . . . He shall take care that the laws be faithfully executed."

Third: "The judicial power of the State shall be vested in a Supreme Court, Circuit courts and such other courts as the General Assembly may establish."

In the foregoing paragraphs we find a brief recital of virtually all delegated power vested by the Constitution in the three independent yet co-ordinated branches of our government, and I am sure we are all agreed that no better plan for the "peace, safety and well being" of a State or nation has ever been devised by man.

From earliest childhood we have been schooled to the importance of preserving the sanctity and the independence of each of these separate and distinct departments of government. Certainly no one amongst us today would tolerate an even suggestion of a departure from this truly American order.

INVOKES LINCOLN CHALLENGE

As your Governor, it shall be my high purpose to transact impartially all of the Constitutional duties vested in that office, and to "take care that laws are faithfully executed." With equal determination I shall refrain from the usurpation of undue authority or the invasion of the rights and duties of other departments. I shall entertain a wholesome respect for the acts of the General Assembly as they are written and interpreted, and the decrees of the courts with which I shall always be final. This is Constitutional government preserved in all of its purity, and in that spirit I invoke the challenge of the immortal Lincoln when he said: "Let reverence for the law become the political religion of the nation."

This, as has been so often observed, is indeed a testing time for representative government. For us, assembled here today, it may also be a testing time for our political sanity and capacity for self government. To succeed we must have faith in one another, respect each other's views, and finally move forward under the mandate of our common interest in a common cause. The processes of orderly government must not be jeopardized in this joint undertaking.

At this very hour the whole world is plunged into darkness and despair. Intolerance, greed and the lust for power, have wrecked the whole universe, brought untold misery and death to countless thousands, and completely undermined and shattered the economic welfare of almost every nation.

Even our own beloved country, while still at peace, is rapidly assuming the proportion of an armed camp and billions of dollars are being forever expended in an effort to provide adequate national defense.

CAN'T IGNORE THREATS

Within the week our own National Guard units will be mobilized for a year's intensive training. Hundreds of other young men from our own homes are being called to the colors under the Selective Service laws.

We fervently pray that not a single American soldier will be sacrificed on the altar of another World War, yet we cannot ignore the growing threat to our own safety or be indifferent to the duty of defending the last bulwark of democracy, on our own shores. God only knows when this terrible scourge will pass, but the stern reality of its awful presence cannot be denied.

Indiana can be counted upon to do her part, and to this end your Governor and your Legislature will need the united and sympathetic support of all of her people. Great are the responsibilities that have been thrust upon us and great is the need for a resurgence of our spiritual strength, in order to appraise correctly the conflicting issues that lie before us.

The indomitable courage of our forebears, coupled with our own faith in popular government, must not fail us in this hour of world disaster.

One of our major problems, under these distressful and tragic conditions, in my own humble opinion, is that of the continued existence

Henry F. Schricker. . . "I dedicate myself wholly and completely to the task of providing good and honest government to all."

of democracy in our own country. This simple inaugural ceremony may well be accepted as a symbol of our democratic system. It implies acceptance by citizens of all parties of a leadership in public office, for a definite period, of two public officials who were selected by the free choice of a majority of our people. It symbolizes a method of government to which we in the United States have become thoroughly accustomed and to which every right-thinking American gladly bears allegiance.

Yet we would be blind to our own welfare and to the safety of this system if we failed to recognize and give heed to the subversive influences, altogether too apparent in our own day, that seek to undermine our faith in popular government and lure us into the paths of a false security.

To all of these sinister agencies, whether they come in the form of class hatred, religious bigotry, foreign or domestic propaganda, or political prostitution, we as a people, must register a united, emphatic opposition and denial. National unity, free from rancor and intolerance, alone can preserve the sanctity of our free institutions. It remains for us to free our land of these deadly and destructive enemies.

There can be room for but one flag and one allegiance in this country of ours and our pressing responsibility, as I recognize it, is to "make democracy safe" for our own country. Let it never be said of Indiana that she has given protected refuge to any of these un-American forces or failed in her duty to destroy them.

'HOOSIERS HAVE KEPT FAITH'

Hoosier born and Hoosier bred, I share with you, my fellow citizens, the unreserved pride which flows from an intimate knowledge and sincere appreciation of the glorious history of our own State. Destined by an all-wise Providence to become the cradle of human liberty over the great Northwestern territory, Indiana has never surrendered her rightful place in the Federal constellation nor diminished her ardor for the general welfare and steady progress of her people.

From the very beginning of her proud record her sons and daughters have kept faith with the principles upon which the Republic was founded, and have attracted nation-wide attention by their political fervor and rare capacity for high public service.

The art of politics, with all of its intriguing possibilities, has been an inseparable portion of the daily menu of every Hoosier household, and both of the great political parties represented on this inaugural platform have been co-authors in writing the glowing pages of her governmental achievements. No sister State can lay claim to a more progressive or constructive record, and no spot on earth offers a finer opportunity for honest and unselfish service.

"The worth of a state, in the long run," in the words of an English philosopher, "is the worth of the individuals composing it." In the light of this great truth we offer Indiana's proud record as a challenge to succeeding generations who shall carry the torch of human progress in the future.

In the fields of labor and industry, agriculture and science, literature and art, education and religion, our people have established not only their own worth, but also the worth of our great State. They have wrought a matchless record in every field of human endeavor, met every crisis with indomitable courage, and constantly nurtured a spirit of tolerance and neighborly unity that has brought renown to Hoosierdom throughout the civilized world.

It is for a continuance and steady growth of this priceless spirit of tolerance and unity that I plead most earnestly in these closing words of my inaugural message. With it, we can face the future with great confidence, and together accomplish the tasks immediately before us; without it, we may well bring discredit upon ourselves and merit the just indignation of those who have honored us with their approval.

ONLY ONE PURPOSE

I fervently pray that this day shall mark the beginning of a new era of political and social unity in Indiana; that it shall be remembered as a day of honest consecration to public duty, and that we may carry from here a deeper devotion to the God-given virtues that have made us a great and noble people.

I am deeply grateful to a kindly Providence that cast my lot on Indiana's soil, and also to a generous people who bestowed this high trust to my keeping. Their continuing loyalty, honest counsel and unmeasured confidence will become increasingly precious to me in the discharge of my official duties.

I have only one purpose in this solemn hour and that is to dedicate myself wholly and completely to the task of providing good government and honest government to all of our people.

To this end I pledge my earnest co-operation with all other branches of Government and with every other official in public service. I entertain no selfish desire for unwarranted power, neither do I wish to write my record in terms of petty political advantage.

The people of Indiana have chosen me as their chief executive and I shall strive to bring a dignified and honorable service to that important office.

I have given my solemn oath to "take care that the laws be faithfully executed." This shall be done to the best of my ability, without fear or favor, and certainly without malice toward any man. God helping me, I cannot fail in this high and sacred undertaking.

CLERIC TO DESCRIBE FUND REQUIREMENTS

Dr. George Emerson Barnes of Overbrook, Pa., will describe the needs arising out of the present wars at a dinner for Presbyterians of 11 counties this evening in the Tabernacle Presbyterian Church.

Dr. Barnes is the executive secretary of the Presbyterian United World Fund of $625,000 to be given to six special causes "over and above" the usual Presbyterian benevolences. The causes are spiritual welfare of soldiers and sailors, Presbyterian and other missions, European churches, China relief and refugees.

Dr. Roy Ewing Vale, Tabernacle pastor and dinner host, is also local fund chairman. He is assisted by Dr. Alexander E. Sharp, executive secretary of the Indiana Synod; the Rev. Harold Turpin and Fernor S. Cannon.
