

LIFTING OF RUSSIAN EMBARGO IS SHOCK

Many in Congress Wonder if U. S. Consulted Britain and If So Why Either Country Should Feel It Can Rely on Moscow Promises.

By WILLIAM PHILIP SIMMS
Times Foreign Editor

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—The lifting of the "moral embargo" against Soviet Russia, partner in aggression with Nazi Germany, struck a large section of Congress as something of a bombshell.

Coming as it did on the heels of the new trade pact between Russia and the Reich—a pact which calls for the delivery to Germany of "unprecedented" amounts of commodities, including foodstuffs, oil and oil derivatives—it was a bewildering development.

In addition to Soviet purchases in this country of petroleum and petroleum products, cotton, machine tools and other things imperatively needed by a nation at war, Russia presumably may now buy American planes and essential such as aluminum, molybdenum and other items included in the moral embargo.

It is true that these things are now difficult to obtain in the United States, owing to the piling up of prior orders. On the other hand, there is a large surplus of cotton (indispensable for most varieties of high explosives), grain and other foodstuffs including vegetable and animal fats, without which armies cannot long remain on the march. Also gas and oil, without which bombers cannot leave the ground.

Reversal of Attitude
Both Moscow and Berlin, within the past two weeks, hailed their new trade agreement as of the utmost importance to both countries. To Germany, hard pressed as she is for many of the above articles, it was a godsend.

At the same time, Great Britain has repeated her plea to this country for more planes, ships and other things, including war vessels, without which her blockade to keep supplies from reaching the Nazis cannot be made wholly effective.

Even this partial rapprochement with Russia constitutes something of a reversal of the Administration's attitude. On Dec. 1, 1939, at the time of Russia's attack on Poland, President Roosevelt publicly condemned the action.

He said it came as a "profound shock to the Government and people of the United States," and added that it was tragic to realize that "wanting disregard for law is still on the march." Such behavior, he said, "jeopardizes the rights of mankind to self-government."

Was London Consulted?
The reversal, therefore, strikes Washington observers as a mystery as well as a surprise. London must have been consulted or at least informed, for recently she has been expressing concern lest American products find their way to Germany, despite the blockade, via Vladivostok, Russia's principal Far Eastern port.

Both Washington and London have been seeking a better understanding with Moscow. Yet less than a fortnight ago the official press of the Soviet Union condemned the United States for violating its own neutrality by aiding Britain and declared that the Anglo-American effort to drive a wedge between Berlin and Moscow was doomed to failure.

The mystery is not that improved relations with Russia might be considered to the interest of America and Britain—provided that Russia would stay put. The puzzle is to find out what makes either country feel that it could rely on any promise Russia might now make.

Regarded as German Partner
Russia is widely regarded here as a full partner of Nazi Germany.

Had Stalin not given Hitler a free hand against Poland, Britain and France, the Nazis would not have dared to march. The German General Staff was unanimously opposed to fighting a major war on two fronts at the same time.

Russia is held equally guilty with Germany in starting the conflict. She has also shared in the spoils. She grabbed half of Poland, after Poland was defeated by Germany. One by one she took over Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia—three of Europe's little democracies. Next she attacked Finland, and followed that up by taking Bessarabia from Rumania.

For the United States or Britain to place any reliance whatever on Russia at this time, it is pretty generally felt here, would be dangerous.

ARMOR PLATE WITH RUBBER
FAIRHAVEN, Mass. (U. P.)—John W. Forgie has invented a rubber and armor plate cone-shaped roof which he says will make ships bomb-proof. Recently the Duke of Windsor sent thanks to Forgie for a suggestion to electrify the balloon barrage used to protect British cities.

after a cold then what

DOCTORS stress remaining in bed until the body temperature is normal. Sound advice.

You know how weak you feel after a cold. Colds play havoc in weakening the body. The story is well told in the blood picture. It is important to build back body strength right away to carry the load of work, worries, and loss of sleep. A weakened body may be more susceptible to collapse or long drawn out recovery.

So reason sensibly and take the choice of millions by immediately starting on a course of S.S.S. Tonic—taken three times a day immediately before meals. In the absence of a local infection or organic disease, you should note improvement in the way you feel and look within the first 10 days. The confidence of millions over many years is the best testimonial of this product.

An experience with S.S.S. Tonic will cause you to say to your friends, S.S.S. made me "feel and look like myself again."
