Reviews Book

Mrs. Olive Ensen Tindler is reviewing "The Sun Is My Undoing" today at a guest day luncheon of the Delta Gamma Mothers' Club in the Butler University chapter house.

Cordell Hull's Quiet Dignity Is Reflected in His Apartment-Home

Eye-delighting color characterizes the inviting living room of the Cordell Hulls' pictured in the February House Beautiful magazine. Here Mrs. Hull's rare fans, snuff boxes, porcelains and South American figurines find perfect setting.

Against the rich coloring of the crimson and beige draperies and the cream-painted walls of the Hulls' dining room, the 18th Century mahogany pieces show to excellent advantage. Simplicity is the keynote of the furnishings throughout the apartment.

Furnished in 18th Century Style

"In every sense of the word, the apartment of Secretary of State Cordell Hull and his gracious wife is a truly fine American home. From the farthest corner of the inviting living room to the neat confines of the Secretary's home office, the apartment radiates like an aura the unaffectedness, simplicity, and serenity of its occupants."

That's the way Lenore Kiefer puts it after viewing the surroundings in which the Hulls make their home. The story of what she saw appears in the February issue of House Beautiful magazine. Following is a synopsis:

One of the first rooms as you enter, is the Secretary's home office which is filled with mementoes of a long life in politics and economics. Dominating the room is an unpretentious desk with its twin phones and uncluttered surface.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Hull have their own bedrooms, says Miss Kiefer. The Secretary's is restful and unobtrusive, closely allied in coloring to the adjoining study. But Mrs. Hull's room is delicate and feminine. The furniture predominantly French, and painted French gray, finds a perfect background in the subtle rose-beige tint chosen for the walls and woodwork. This same color note is repeated in the taffeta draperies that frame the simple but impressively treated triple window.

Has Intimate Library

The living and dining rooms both are furnished in dignified 18th Century style, according to Miss Kiefer. For special occasions, the Duncan-Phyfe table is lengthened so that 20 people may be seated.

While 18th Century is the dominant note in the living room furniture, it is so skillfully combined with comfortable modern pieces that the effect of the whole is of great charm. The walls and woodwork are painted a velvety blue, and the various fabrics repeat the soft tones that are echoed in the Oriental rugs. Beyond the living room is a small and intimate library, the Hulls' favorite retreat, Miss Kiefer reports.

Talk on France Is Booked

"News from France" will be the title of a talk by Madame Yvonne D. Chamilovitch before the Alliance Francaise at 8 o'clock Friday evening in the Marott Hotel. The speaker is a teacher of French at Tudor Hall School.

She will present recent happenings in both occupied and unoccupied France. A dinner in her honor will be served at 6:30 p. m. Mme. Chamilovitch is a native of Berri, France, and taught for several years in the government schools of France before coming to this country to live.
