

Homemaking—

Next Week Is Nation's Cherry Week;
Celebrate It by Serving a Cobbler

THE INVENTOR OF THE FRUIT COBBLER—a genius of forgotten history—holds a very high place in the affection of all dessert-lovers everywhere. Deep dish, sweet, fruity fillings, crisp top crust, and a mouth-watering fragrance in the baking—these are the makings of a proper cobbler.

Though cobblers made according to many different recipes are as old as colonial cookery in this country, there are ever-new and interesting ways of varying this favorite dessert. One of the happiest new cherry cobbler inspirations invites the cook to vary her formula by topping the cherry mixture with small rich-flavored pinwheels made easily with ready-prepared biscuit mix, sprinkled liberally with shredded American cheese.

SPECIAL CHERRY COBBLER

- 1 No. 2 can tart pitted red cherries
- 1/2 cup sugar
- 3 tablespoons cornstarch
- 1/4 to 1/2 cup milk
- 1 cup prepared biscuit mix
- 1 cup shredded American cheese

Drain the cherries and heat the juice to boiling. Blend the sugar and cornstarch and add enough water to make a thin paste. Gradually add this to the hot cherry juice and cook until thick and clear. Add the cherries. Place in a shallow baking dish.

Add the milk to the biscuit mix and blend well. Roll out to an oblong piece 1/4-inch thick. Sprinkle with the shredded cheese and roll up like jelly roll. Cut into 1/2-inch slices and place them around the edge of the cherry mixture. Bake in a hot oven, 425 degrees, twelve to fifteen minutes, or until the biscuit pinwheels are done.

Good Meals for Good Morale

BREAKFAST: Orange juice, French toast, syrup, crisp bacon, coffee, milk.

LUNCHEON: Baked beans with salt pork, brown bread, cole slaw, sugar candies, tea, milk.

DINNER: Corned beef hash, red cabbage and apples, cherry cobbler, coffee, milk.

Today's Recipe

RED CABBAGE AND APPLES

(Serves 4)

Three cups finely shredded red cabbage, 2 cups sliced tart apples, 3 cups boiling water, 1/4 teaspoon nutmeg, 1/4 teaspoon ground cloves, 3 tablespoons sugar, 1 teaspoon salt, 3 tablespoons lemon juice (or 1/4 cup vinegar).

Combine cabbage, apples, water, nutmeg and cloves. Simmer uncovered over medium heat until tender. Add sugar, salt and lemon juice just before removing from heat. Serve in individual dishes with a dab of butter if desired.

Leftover red cabbage is delicious served cold as a relish. Store in tightly covered jar in refrigerator. Add more lemon juice just before serving to give fresh flavor as well as additional Vitamin C.

The Question Box

Q—Is after-dinner coffee, intended for service in the living room after the evening meal, made in a different way than ordinary breakfast coffee? Should sugar and cream be served with it?

A—After-dinner coffee is usually made stronger than that served at breakfast, and it is customary to serve it black. Use from one and one-half to two times as much coffee. Cream and sugar should be on the tray for those who prefer it.

Q—Does sour milk differ chemically from fresh milk?

A—No. The acidity in sour milk is greater because of the acid-forming bacteria, but the constituents are the same.

President of V. F. W. Auxiliary, War Bride of 1917, Is Now A War Mother of 1942

The war bride of 1917 was blond, blue-eyed, petite and pretty. Today, Mrs. Alice M. Donahue, national president of the Ladies Auxiliary of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, is so attractive she might be mistaken for a war bride of 1942.

"It was so exciting then!" she exclaimed as she told interviewers at the Claypool Hotel about her romance with a New York National Guardsman in the days when Americans were talking about the Kaiser, about the sorrows of Belgium and of France, about the American war brides.

"Yes, it was exciting to be a war bride," Mrs. Donahue added. "But it is different now."

She explained why: When James Donahue, the war bridegroom of 1917, came marching home with the famous, fighting 27th Division in 1918, his wife introduced him to his year-old son Arthur. Today Arthur himself wears the uniform of the Marine Corps at San Diego.

Doing Her Part But Mrs. Donahue isn't the sort of a mother who would sit down and worry. On the contrary, she is doing her part to arouse the members of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the V. F. W., and the rest of American womanhood, for that matter, to a greater war effort.

Since her election to the auxiliary's presidency in Philadelphia, she has been on leave from her regular job as managing clerk of a New York law firm. She has been able to get home to Glen Cove, L. I., only once since the election, and then for a week.

Leaders of the Indiana department of the Ladies' Auxiliary to the V. F. W. have been in constant huddle with her for three days. The national program and how it relates to the state organization is the order of the day.

V. F. W. Auxiliary Program

Mrs. Donahue presented the organization's program to Governor Schriber yesterday. The program, a triple-header, follows:

1. Members of the auxiliary are working in the various fields, some taking courses in home nursing, others in nutrition. The latter will be of tremendous value in the event that we have various food substitutes, Mrs. Donahue explained.

2. A "Hospitality Program" for men in service has been organized. This has the usual features of dancing and entertainment, but stress is placed upon inviting service men to homes and treating them to real home life with "no fixin's." It is then the practice to find out the address of parents or relatives and write to them.

3. The sale of defense bonds and stamps is pushed throughout the country.

Working in close co-operation with Mrs. Donahue are Mrs. Beulah Weber, president of the Indiana department, and Mrs. Ruth Fields, chairman of arrangements of the visitation.

DEAR JANE JORDAN—I am 50 years old and have five children, all married. I am still a neat, nice looking woman. I have a nice home, too, and my husband is awfully good to me. He is 54 years old. I was operated on in the summer and was in bed for six weeks. During that time my sister became infatuated with my husband and she still hangs around him. He says he hates her now and wants to live with me, but still it hurts me. I am in good health now. Please advise me what to do. LONELY.

Answer—The only right and reasonable thing for you to do is to stand by your good husband and forget what happened. It would be too bad if the relationship which you have built up throughout all these years couldn't survive one brief storm during a time when the man was lonely and distracted and therefore more vulnerable to temptation.

Of course the incident hurt you and stirred up hostile feelings within you. That is only a natural reaction. It will make you feel better to hate someone but why not take it out on your treacherous sister? Actually your husband should bear half the responsibility for he was an adult and knew what he was doing. It was, however, his first offense after years of loyalty, whereas your sister must have harbored ill feelings against you all her life. If you will think back I imagine you could trace a whole history of her rivalry with you. Only a deep-seated jealousy could have inspired her to take advantage of you when you were sick and helpless. Do you want such treachery to succeed, or are you willing to stand your ground and prove that you are still woman enough to hold your husband's respect and affection?

If you have any stamina and common sense at all you will stick by your post and refuse to allow an envious sister to disrupt your marriage and turn you into a lonely, disappointed woman during the years when you should be enjoying the fruits of your labors as a wife and mother.

Your husband regrets the silly episode. Now let him forget it. He hates your sister because instinctively he realizes that she cared nothing for him but was concerned only with dealing his wife a body blow. Perhaps his pride will not allow him to admit this fact. He doesn't try to think it out. He just knows that he has suffered a powerful revulsion of feeling against the woman. Don't try to make him fit the picture together. Just forgive him.

JANE JORDAN.
