New Clothesline Has Suction Caps
For Fastening It to Apartment Wall

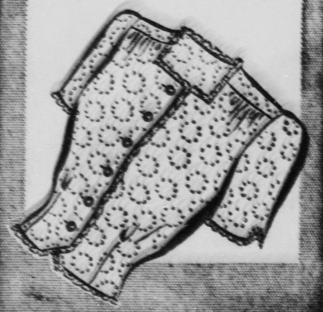

TWO GADGETS seen recently in local shops are designed to aid the home laundering process.

For the apartment dweller who swishes her lingerie in a lavatory full of suds and drapes it on tub edge or towel rod, there is a length of clothes line with suction cups at either end to fasten it from wall to wall.

With the set comes a number of smoothly finished small clothes pins. When undies and hose are dry, the line can be tucked neatly away in a cabinet or drawer.

And for those precious hose and filmy fabrics which are so easily snagged, there are spring-type pins made of rubber—or there were the last time we looked. Incidentally, the wearing of rubber gloves by the "laundress" protects fabrics from rough fingernails.

Good Meals for Good Morale

BREAKFAST: Grapefruit juice, codfish cakes, corn muffins, marmalade, coffee, milk.

LUNCHEON: Creamed tuna fish on toast, enriched hard rolls, canned fruit, cookies, tea, milk.

DINNER: Roast spareribs, mashed potatoes, Harvard beets, green salad, cheese and crackers, coffee, milk.

Today's Recipe

ROAST SPARERIBS

(Serves 4 to 6)

Four pounds fresh spareribs, salt and pepper to taste, 1/4 cup chopped onion.

Wipe meat with cloth and cut into serving pieces if desired. Rub with salt and pepper and place in large baking pan. Sprinkle with onion. For additional flavor, sprinkle with 1/4 teaspoon thyme and bake 2 apples, sliced, with the meat. Cover and bake in hot oven (450 degrees F.) about 45 minutes, until tender. Turn meat once during baking. Remove cover during last 15 minutes to brown meat.

The Question Box

Q—I have been asked to make meat loaf to serve 50 persons for a club luncheon. Can you tell me the amount of beef and other ingredients to use?

A—Ten pounds of raw chopped beef, 2 pounds dry bread crumbs, 4 cups of water or meat stock, 8 beaten eggs, 3 or more tablespoons salt, 1 teaspoon pepper, 5 teaspoons mixed herbs, and 5 tablespoons minced onion are needed.

Mix all ingredients thoroughly, pack in the pans and bake two and one-half hours by slow heat. Baste occasionally. More or less water or stock may be needed, and more or less pepper and salt according to taste.

In the Fashion Picture

The importance of veiling for hat decoration is illustrated in this "muffin" type hat of novelty straw.

Hats Reflect the War News, Use of Substitute Materials And Today's Practicality

By ROSEMARY REDDING

THREE OUTSTANDING TRENDS are notable in hat styles for spring. All stem from the adversity of war.

1. One is the use of substitute materials—not all ersatz but materials that have been around a long time and just never considered before for hats and trimmings.

2. Another is a plethora of styles reflecting the war news—little hats copied from the commandos, and those trimmed with "blackout" flowers.

3. The third trend is a marked distinction between hats for work and hats for play. This despite the number a woman can afford may be less because of higher prices, budgeting and all that.

Spied yesterday in a showing of millinery fashions in Block's second floor department were hats made from crocheted yarn (no priority there), a Reichmann model of synthetic straw (the imported kind will soon be hard to get) and trimmings that included cotton flowers, rick rack, fringe and glass. Veils, with special decorations, like white narcessus, artificial bee wings and polka dots, were used extensively to do the complete trimming job.

There was increasing evidence, too, that fabrics will be combined with felts and straws to make up for shortages.

A gay Persian scarf made the band of a blue felt hat and fell down about the shoulders as a scarf (a little reminiscent of last year's wimple). Bright taffeta (in the plaids like a little girl's hair bows) put the attract in attractive. And no woman could be anything but gay in a tiny calot covered with lavender violets with a front halo of soft lavender feathers.

"This said that nothing does as much for a woman's spirit as to buy a pretty hat. Despite the war and its effects, it looks as if the ingenious designers were not going to let the American woman down.

We, the Women—There Is One At Every Bridge Game

By RUTH MILLETT

IT WOULDN'T be a feminine bridge party if there weren't present—

At least one tight-lipped woman who firmly put a haphazard, happy-go-lucky player in her place.

At least one woman who always had to be told what had been bid.

At least one woman who got a peculiar satisfaction out of saying gently "In your hand."

At least one woman who insisted on quoting her favorite expert as though his voice were the law.

At least one review of the servant problem.

At least one piece of gossip shocking enough to make the afternoon worth-while.

At least one honey-voiced fight between two women who pretend to get along.

At least one woman who thought the pie crust was too short and the coffee too strong.

At least one woman who spent the afternoon talking about her diet.

At least one bit of guessing as to whether or not an absent member was "expecting."

AT LEAST one woman whose clothes were conspicuous enough to be discussed at every table.

At least one woman who was annoyed when she didn't get first prize.

At least one woman who drummed on the table with her long nails while figuring out her hand.

At least one miscast woman who said to herself, "Never again."

Put your problems in a letter to Jane Jordan who will answer your questions in this column daily.

DEAR JANE JORDAN—I am a girl of 20 years old. I have been married but am separated from my husband. My mother-in-law came between us. She is my husband's foster mother. She took him when he was two months old and he is 22 now but he still does as she says. He says he owes her a lot. Well, I think the same but she should not have wanted him to do everything she said and nothing I said. Her bossing got on my nerves so much that I came home to my mother and little sister and went to work to help them. My father is dead.

My mother-in-law babied my husband so much and bought him everything he wanted until he was afraid to leave home for fear he could not support himself and me and still have everything he was used to having. I still love him but guess I will have to forget.

There is a nice young man who wants to marry me. He can give me a home and I can give him time for he is good to me and I come first with him.

MRS. D. A.

Answer—Your first mistake was to marry a man before he was able to support you in a home of your own. It is just as unfair for a foster mother to make her son feel obligated to her as it is for a natural mother to extend her influence beyond its normal span. Both must learn to let go or lose the respect of the son in the end. The fact that the boy wanted to live at home should have warned you that he preferred to remain a child and was not ready for adult responsibilities.

However, you made the mistake, and it would have been better for both of you if you had possessed the strength of character to stick it out until the maternal tie was broken. After all you could have worked to help your husband establish a home as well as to have worked to help your mother and little sister. You let your mother-in-law win out when you had enough right on your side to have been victorious.

As long as you love your husband it is unfair for you to consider marriage with another man. You think you can learn to love him but I think you had better learn to love him before marriage instead of simply hoping you will love him afterward.

At the moment you are so occupied with receiving love as a savior to your wounded pride that you overlook the importance of giving love. In your present state of mind you aren't capable of making a wise decision. Why rush into another marriage when you have so much unfinished business on your hands?

JANE JORDAN.

HOW TO MAKE A HIT WITH YOUR "PRODUCTION SOLDIER"

• You bet our war workers deserve clean shop clothes. Give his heavily soiled garments an overnight Climalene bath... 2 tablespoons to tub. It really gets the grease and grime. Use, too, in regular wash for all clothes... they come out so clean and white. And, remember, a teaspoon in the rinse water helps prevent soap scum... gives you a lovely wash.

SAVES 3 WAYS

1. TIME—Climalene saves extra rinsing.
2. WORK—Saves rubbing and scrubbing.
3. SOAP—USE less of your favorite soap.

"My husband kissed the cook"

That's what many a wife who hasn't been "kissed" for her cooking in years has been saying since cooking on a Modern GAS Range. Women everywhere have found that modern gas cookery arouses a new devotion in husbands—and creates a new, enthusiastic appetite.

It's so easy to broil juicy, tender steaks in the convenient, superfast smokeless broiler or to cook delicious roasts in the spacious, efficient oven of the Modern GAS Range. Even inexpensive cuts of meat become appetizing and flavorful. And without any special touch of magic you can produce tempting pastries that will rouse shouts of joy from the men of the house.

There are so many convenient features about the Modern GAS Range—all designed to make cooking easier and to make you a better cook: adjustable top burners that can be flicked from high speed to simmer, automatic oven control to eliminate the guesswork, fast preheating in the oven and broiler.

Save Time, Food, Fuel, With a
MODERN GAS RANGE

It actually costs less to cook those finer meals on a Modern Gas Range—there are so many economies in food and fuel that even the most exacting budget seems to stretch further than ever before.
