

WPA Will Place Labor on Farms

A state-wide farm labor placement program was announced today by John K. Jennings, Indiana administrator of the WPA.

Mr. Jennings said Franklin DeWald, head of division of re-employment and training, would direct the program. A supervisory worker will be appointed as liaison man in each rural county of Indiana.

About 3500 men now on WPA rolls have had farm experience.

TWO ARRESTED AS MOLESTERS

Mother, Daughter Followed By Red Coupe; Cruiser Catches Suspect.

Two suspects, caught in the act of attempting to molest women on the streets, were arrested by police last night.

A mother and her daughter, walking along N. Illinois st., called police when a man in a red coupe followed them and tried to stop them at a street corner. A police cruiser car near the scene caught the suspect a few blocks away. He was held on a vagrancy charge pending further investigation.

Another suspect was arrested in the 100 block, N. Jefferson st., when he was caught molesting small children playing in the street.

A 17-year-old girl reported that after she left a N. Illinois st. movie last night a man in a car followed her for several blocks.

DIES WHILE HAVING PHOTOGRAPH MADE

Mrs. Rose Montesanti Poline, 1006 E. Washington st., died yesterday of a heart attack while having a photograph made in Charles Harmon's studio, at 44 W. Ohio st.

Mrs. Poline had operated a restaurant at the E. Washington st. address with her husband, Frank, for eight years.

She was born in Italy 35 years ago, and had lived in Indianapolis 21 years.

Funeral services will be held at 8:30 a. m. Thursday in the Grinsinger funeral home and at 9 a. m. in Holy Cross Catholic church. Burial will be in St. Joseph's cemetery.

In a Hurry

Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt appears pleasant enough, but is in too big a hurry to strike a pose for capitol photographers as she leaves the office of civilian defense after tendering her resignation to Director J. M. Landis. That's a portable radio Mrs. Roosevelt carries.

SHIFT IN BRITISH AIR WAR SOUGHT

Critics Doubt Bombers Get Decisive Result in Raids Behind Enemy Lines.

By WILLIAM H. STONEMAN

Copyright, 1942, by The Indianapolis Times and The Chicago Daily News, Inc.

LONDON, Feb. 24.—Agitation is increasing for drastic reversal in British air policy which since last before the war has been based on the use of heavy bombers behind enemy lines in an attempt to achieve strategically decisive results.

Since that policy was initiated, it has been proved to the satisfaction of the entire world that, even with favorable conditions, heavy bombers operating over enemy territory cannot either knock out production or terrorize populations to the point of capitulation.

This was proved in 1940 when the Germans failed, in the first instance, to break through in daylight when precision or pattern bombing might have been effective, and later failed, despite the heavy mass bombing of British cities at night, either to cripple production or to crack the nation's morale.

Nazis Keep Producing

The argument has been clinched in recent months when the British, finally equipped with enough heavy bombers to tackle the job seriously, have tried and failed to upset German war production by night bombing.

Now it is known that this bombing has been neither precise nor strategically effective and with the perfection of German defenses it has become dreadfully costly in both men and machines. The chances are that it will become increasingly so if continued.

Several changes are being urged by expert critics. They feel that heavy-bombers production should be maintained but believe the use of heavy bombers should be altered and that emphasis in production should be concentrated, for the time being, on lighter types of aircraft which are urgently needed for direct military and naval operations.

Fewer Targets Suggested

Heavy bombers should be employed, they feel, either for backing up military operations as has been the case in Libya or, when strategic bombings are required, should be used more economically.

Maj. Oliver Stewart, air correspondent of the London Observer, suggests "drastic reduction in the number of targets, selection of large and vulnerable targets—or of military objectives surrounded by large vulnerable targets—and full concentration of effort for every major operation."

Current production, these critics insist, should be concentrated on machines which can be used for reconnaissance, fighter supremacy, torpedoing of ships, and tank-busting.

SCHOOL BOARD SLATE PLAN RAPPED AGAIN

Additional criticism has been directed at the methods used in selecting candidates for the Indianapolis school board.

Every four years a slate of candidates for the board is selected by the citizen's school committee and the candidates are elected without opposition.

The latest opposition to the committee's selection of candidates came from the Indianapolis branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

The association condemned the "methods used by the citizens committee in selecting candidates" on the ground that the public schools should be administered by a "democratically elected board."

Other organizations have adopted similar resolutions recently.

'Sunday Driver' To Stay at Home

NEW YORK, Feb. 24 (U.P.).—The end of the "Sunday driver" for the duration of the war was foreshadowed today in a statement by the Rubber Manufacturers association warning motorists that their present tires may have to last for the next five years.

The association advised motorists to assume that there will be no new civilian tires until the war is over and urged complete elimination of non-essential driving and the use of substitute transportation wherever possible.

"To be on the safe side," the statement said, "it might be well to budget the life of your present tires over a five-year period. This means that if you estimate the remaining life of your present tires at 10,000 miles you must limit your yearly use to 2000 miles. This would mean only 166 miles a month or about 40 miles a week."

GABLE TO RESUME WORK IN NEW FILM

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 24 (U.P.).—Clark Gable prepared to return to the sound stages today, quieting rumors which followed death of his actress wife, Carole Lombard, in a plane crash six weeks ago that he might quit the screen.

He will go to work in "Somewhere I'll Find You," playing opposite Lana Turner. The film was in production at the time Miss Lombard was killed. Filming was resumed at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer yesterday, and Mr. Gable is expected to make his appearance this week.
