Rural Women May Ask Same Draft Status for Farm Help As Given to Defense Workers

A resolution asking that draft boards give the same consideration to skilled farm laborers as to defense plant workers will be considered tomorrow by Indiana farm women attending the 12th annual conference of the social and educational department of the Indiana Farm Bureau. Approximately 1000 of them are attending sessions today in the Murat Temple and 1000 more are expected before the conference ends tomorrow afternoon.

Other resolutions up for action tomorrow morning ask: 1. A "thorough and competent appraisal be made regarding the necessity claims for priority on tires as they fit into the scheme of winning the war. . . . For example, are wholesale beer and liquor truck tires, now on priority lists, more essential to the winning of war than farm car tires?"

2. Each township farm bureau give active support to a program of education for increased production and use of home grown vegetables, eggs and meat and to health programs.

3. All citizens exercise the privilege of voting and that citizenship responsibility in democracy be given increased attention in schools and colleges.

4. Farm groups study the problem of maintaining parity and equal opportunity for agriculture in the national economy.

5. A study of the regulation which gives the community the right to remonstrate against liquor trade and traffic.

6. Local discussion groups to study problems of farmers arising out of the present war emergency.

Governor Schricker Speaks

In welcoming the women this morning, Governor Henry F. Schricker pointed out the valiant service of farmers and farm women in World War I and stressed the importance of providing food to the allied forces in the present war.

Miss Fannie Brooks, extension specialist in health education at the University of Illinois, spoke on "Let's Live While We Work." She urged modernization of Indiana farms and pointed out that "on wash day the average farm woman carries 78 tons of water from wells to the house each year."

She urged co-operation with state and national campaigns for the control of venereal disease and for wider prenatal care of farm women.

Among other speakers this morning were Hassil F. Schenck, president of the bureau, and Mrs. Lillie D. Scott, head of the social and educational department.

Dr. Viva Boethe, director, bureau of business research at Ohio State university will speak at the 1:15 afternoon session on "Dollars, Women and Common Sense." Nurses Enroll in Red Cross Reserve

ALEXANDRIA, Va., Feb. 24—The rate of enrollment of Indiana nurses in the first reserve of American Red Cross is eight times what it was at the outbreak of the war, Miss Marguerite Wales, eastern area director of the Red Cross Nursing Service, announced today.

New registration of Indiana nurses in that division totaled 23 in January as compared with three in November.

"The Red Cross national total of first reserve nurses as of Dec. 31 numbered approximately 25,700, Miss Wales said. "In addition there were 38,789 nurses in the second reserve. Since war started, the national rate of enrollment in the first reserve has increased 400 per cent. However, the goal of 50,000 required by the army and navy has not yet been reached."

Indiana second reserve nurses, who by military regulations regarding marriage or age are not available for military duty but are prepared to serve in disasters and civilian defense, are encouraged to teach Red Cross home nursing courses.
