SWITZERLAND RATIONS MEAT

Their 19 Ounces Weekly Still Higher Than Nazi Neighbors.

BERN, March 3.—Europe's grim hand of privation today closed another inch tighter on Switzerland's food situation when meat rations were announced.

From now on, every Swiss citizen will be allotted 500 grams, or 19 ounces, of meat and bones weekly instead of the former unlimited quantity. (Outside of meatless days.) Switzerland's former three meatless days are now reduced to two—Wednesday and Friday. Game, fowl and fish are excluded from today's ration order.

More Than Neighbors
However, Switzerland's meat allotment is higher than that of its neighbors at war: Italians receive 3.5 ounces, Germans 14 ounces and Frenchmen approximately 9 ounces of meat and bones weekly.

The official communiqué says that the introduction of meat rationing is necessitated by the fact that meat production has diminished to one-third of the figure at the beginning of the war.

You Can't Have a Balanced Diet With the Important and Health-Essential Factors of VITAMIN B COMPLEX Missing!

A vitamin-deficient diet may cause serious loss of vitality in the human system. You need ALL the Vitamins ALL the time to promote and maintain normal health. Nutritional experts have found that the average American diet, no matter how well-balanced, may not supply sufficient vitamins. Further, most diets are seriously lacking in VITAMIN B COMPLEX. VITAMIN B COMPLEX consists not just of Vitamin B1, but also important Vitamin G (B2), Vitamins B3, B4, B5, B6, Pantothenic and Nicotinic Acids, Anti-Gray Hair Factor, etc. You must have the whole Vitamin B Complex for maximum health.

- Symptoms of Vitamin B Complex Deficiency
- Loss of appetite and weight . . . mal-nutrition.
 - Insufficient hydrochloric acid in stomach digestive juices.
 - Constipation and colitis . . . loss of intestinal tone.
 - Pain in muscles and common neuritis pain.
 - Changes in the strength and rhythm of the heart.
 - Skin disorders of pellagra and beriberi.

KEENE'S N-a-t-u-r-a-l VITAMIN B COMPLEX Tablets

The genuine Natural Vitamin B Complex is developed by the Fleischmann Laboratories from a high type Brewer's Yeast, and an extract of corn processed with clostridium acetobutylicum. This is the natural Vitamin B Complex; do not confuse it with synthetic mixtures.

If you have any reason to suspect your diet is vitamin-deficient, here is our recommendation: Take the whole Vitamin B Complex, as present in KEENE'S Vitamin B Complex Tablets. The Complex contributes benefits to human nutrition that do not result from the use of preparations which contain just one or two of the ten factors of the Complex, such as commonly provided by the countless pills and capsules offered on every hand. BE SURE OF GETTING ALL THE B FACTORS, as provided by KEENE'S Vitamin B Complex Tablets.

Warns Farmers

I. H. Hull . . . "co-operation may be the balance wheel."

HULL APPEALS FOR NEW UNITY

Farm Bureau Had Greatest Year, Manager Declares; 300 Attend Session.

Convening today at the Antlers hotel for the annual stockholders' meeting, members of the Indiana Farm Bureau Co-operative association plunged into the problems of the farmer and the war.

A resolution expected to be proposed this afternoon urged farmers to meet in small "democratic" groups to plan emergency actions. An association official explained that this was in line with the group's philosophy that the small body is the basis of democracy.

Purdue Economist to Talk

Dr. T. K. Cowden, Purdue university agricultural economist, was to address about 300 farmers attending the sessions this afternoon on "Present Day Business Trends," and G. W. Starr, Indiana university business research director, was to discuss "Business in the Post-War Period."

Rep. Jerry Voorhis of California, author of the recent book, "Morale of Democracy," will speak tonight. In his annual manager's report this morning, I. H. Hull said that the association had done a $9,500,000 business last year, effecting a saving of $800,000 to Indiana Farm Bureau members.

"Greatest Year in History"

Declaring the association had completed the "greatest year of our history," Mr. Hull warned that "the future can hold undreamed of opportunities or it can hold disaster according to the measure of our performance. In the coming emergency co-operation may be the balance wheel which will save our American democratic way of life."

"Everyone," he declared, "should be assigned a specific job just as every soldier is given a task."

An election of directors for Districts 5, 7 and 9 will be held tomorrow afternoon and speeches will be heard from L. A. Taylor, of the Ohio farm bureau; Dr. Joseph G. Knapp, of Farm Credit association, and M. J. Briggs, assistant general manager and treasurer of the Indiana co-operative.

The meeting will close tomorrow with C. C. Palmer, vice president, presiding, Frank Beall, District 8 director, presided today.

RUSTY WEAPON LINKS SERIES OF ROBBERIES

An old rusty revolver used by one of two men today in holding up a grocery store linked the bandit pair to the robberies of two trackless trolley operators last night.

Rogie Jamieson was robbed of $50 10 minutes after he opened his grocery at 1448 Roosevelt ave. The trolley operators held up a pair using an old rusty revolver last night were Harry Poirier and Charles Kennedy. Mr. Poirier was robbed at 26th st. and Martindale ave., Mr. Kennedy at 27th and Harding sts.

Tells Jury Her Mind Was Unsound on Night of Mattingly Killing.

him like a child, paid his tuition and bought his books at Indiana university, promoted his career as an attorney, paid his lodge dues, rented him a law office, and once bought him a suit of clothes so he could attend a convention of the Young Democrats of America in Milwaukee.

"For 16 years this woman (Mrs. Payne) and this man (Mr. Mattingly) lived together as man and wife. When she learned that she lost him, she had nothing else to live for. He meant more to her than life itself."

Tells of Passing Home

Arriving at the date of July 5, 1941, Mr. Register said:

"Mr. Mattingly and his wife drove to Bloomington, arriving here between 5 and 6 o'clock, deliberately following an unimproved road. They drove by a house at 411 Lincoln st. (Mrs. Payne's home). This defendant was standing in a front room upstairs. She saw Mrs. Mattingly look toward her home with a devious smile. She saw Mrs. Mattingly turn to her husband and giggle."

"An indelible sensation came over Mrs. Payne. She dropped onto her bed and knew nothing more until, at the county jail, the chief of police asked her for her shoe. She gave up this shoe as requested."

Asked About Shooting

"In the meantime, between the time Mrs. Payne dropped on to the bed at her home and the time she was asked for her shoe at the jail, somebody—I say somebody—had gone to the Gus Nickles home at 702 S. Walnut st. and shot Mr. Mattingly five times in the back as he sat by a window."

"When informed of this fact at the jail, Mrs. Payne asked: 'What's it all about?'"

"Now, doctor, I will ask you to state for the jury, whether in your opinion, Caroline Payne, on the night of July 5, 1941, was of sound or unsound mind?"

Dr. Wiltshire declared:

"I should say that she was of unsound mind."

The prosecution began a cross examination at this point, but Mr. Register interrupted to remind Dr. Wiltshire that under his immunity as a physician, he was not compelled to answer state questions.

Will Testify Tomorrow

"Mrs. Payne definitely will take the stand tomorrow morning," Defense Attorney Q. Austin East and Register said today.

Prosecutor Tackitt indicated that he might not even call the state's own psychiatrist, Dr. Albert F. Crane, of Evansville.

Friday is considered a generous deadline for closing arguments and submission of the case to the jury. Glenn Henderson, Mrs. Payne's nephew, will be heard today.

It was he who introduced Mattingly and Mrs. Payne back in 1923 when Mr. Mattingly first came to Indiana University to study law. Mrs. Payne at that time was circulation manager of the Bloomington World and an Indianapolis newspaper. Mr. Mattingly, working his way through school, handled a rural motor route supervised by Mrs. Payne.

Claim He Jilted Her

The prosecution has charged that Mrs. Payne, from the moment of meeting "Route Man" Mattingly, exercised a baneful influence over his life that, in effect, held him in a love bondage. Mrs. Payne has been pictured as dominating, profane, covetous and jealous.

The state has offered evidence purporting to show that Mr. Mattingly offered many times to marry Mrs. Payne but that she resisted his proposals, preferring him as a "plaything," rather than a husband.

The defense has hammered consistently on the point that Mr. Mattingly jilted his sweetheart after accepting her largesses for years. In stressing favors conferred upon Mr. Mattingly, the defense has introduced evidence to the effect that Mr. Mattingly's entire family often visited the Payne home, "eating at taxes on 1941 income in addition to the levy on current earnings.

Under the treasury's new proposals, a married person with two dependents having a net income of $3000 would pay $118 income tax, compared with $59 under the present law. A single person with the same income would pay $470, compared with the present $231.

The pocketbooks of all Americans, except the very poor, would be hit by the administration's new taxes. Persons in the lower and middle income brackets would bear the brunt of the increases in individual taxes for two reasons.

Seeks to Curb Buying Power

The rates on the wealthy already are high and treasury experts also figured that anti-inflationary aims of the program could be attained only by "mopping up" part of the surplus earnings of persons with incomes under $15,000.

"We should, therefore, tax so as to withdraw the greatest possible volume of purchasing power at this time, when money incomes are high and the quantity of goods for civilian use is shrinking day by day because of the demands of our war effort," he said.

"The way to prevent inflation is to prevent people from engaging in the futile effort to buy more goods than can be produced."

The treasury secretary recommended that congress also raise another $2,000,000,000 more a year by extending the social security program and payments. The proposed new taxes and social security payments would increase federal revenues by more than $9,000,000,000 a year and reach the goal of $27,000,000,000 set by President Roosevelt in his budget message.

Opposes Sales Tax

Mr. Morgenthau urged attainment of this goal "not as the maximum but as the very least that the American people can afford to provide at this critical time."

He reiterated opposition to a general sales tax because "it bears disproportionately on the low income groups whose incomes are almost wholly spent on consumer goods and 'increases prices and makes price control more difficult.'"

Personal exemptions for income tax purposes and normal tax rates for both individuals and corporations would not be changed. The surtax rates on individual incomes would be increased sharply. Excess profits and corporation taxes would be increased and a war surtax added.

The earned income credit on individual returns would be abolished. Enactment of the treasury's program still would leave a deficit of $39,800,000,000 in the 1943 fiscal year.

Woman's Table, Sleeping in Her Bed

That was the gist of the evidence given yesterday by Sanford Deekard, make-up editor of the Bloomington Telephone, of which Mrs. Payne was business manager. Mr. Deekard also cast a sidelight on Mrs. Payne's efforts to publicize Mr. Mattingly into a successful career as an attorney.

Featured News About Him

"Mrs. Payne ordered me to keep a close eye on news items carrying Mr. Mattingly's name," Mr. Deekard told the jury. "Whenever there was a story about him, it was to be given prominent space on page one."

The defense scored a victory of sorts over the prosecution yesterday in winning custody of a packet of Mr. Mattingly's love letters confiscated from Mrs. Payne's pocketbook the night of the shooting.

The prosecution had failed to introduce the letters in evidence and Judge Staff upheld the defense claim that the documents were material evidence to which Mrs. Payne was entitled.

A titter swept the courtroom when the defense maneuver brought out the fact that the prosecution had withheld a single letter from the packet seized from Mrs. Payne. Mr. Tackitt went to his office and got it under instructions from the judge.

It was postmarked "Chicago, June, 1941," was addressed to "My Baby Sweetheart" and signed "H. K."

"H. K." was not identified. Witnesses yesterday included May Mangus, operator of a beauty shop Mrs. Payne once patronized; George Randall, a real estate dealer with whom she had once done business; Kenneth Kerrigan, manager of Penney's store; Leon Whaley, head carrier boy at the Telephone; Bernard Thrasher and Allen Wells, Telephone employees; Sgt. Fred Skirvin and radio operator Charles Robinson of the Bloomington police.

ALLIES TO BEGIN COUNTER BLOWS

New Strategy Is Hinted in Pacific Command Change; Wavell Relieved.

WASHINGTON, March 3 (U. P.).

A new plan of allied strategy envisaging strong counter-blows against Japan in the Southwest Pacific was reported being formed today.

There were numerous signs here and from the Pacific battlefronts that although the united nations' resistance in Java may not be maintained for long, new plans are being mapped to throw up, by means of counter-blows, new barriers in defense of Australia and New Zealand and the route to India and the Near East.

High American military and naval officials have been emphasizing "offensive" in their statements.

Wavell Relieved

Military experts in London believed that the Dutch, with such support and reinforcements in materials as the allies could give them, could fight on indefinitely in Java, but that the island, and with it all the Netherlands Indies, must be given up as a base.

These reports came as the united nations unified command for the Southwest Pacific, set up by President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Winston Churchill, was dissolved. Britain's Gen. Sir Archibald F. Wavell was relieved as its commander-in-chief and shifted to Burma and menaced India.

Wavell was succeeded by Gen. Hein ter Poorten of the Netherlands East Indies.

MacArthur's Name Heard

It was reported that, in negotiations between the united nations' capitals preceding Wavell's shift, suggestions were made that Gen. Douglas MacArthur be brought out of the Philippines to replace Wavell, but there was no official comment upon this.

From Australia came word that the Australian war council, in consultation with representatives of the United States, had adopted a "revised strategy" whereby Australia would become the springboard for "what will ultimately prove to be an irresistible allied counteroffensive."
