

COWARDICE ON TAXES CHARGED

Congress Deferring Action Until After Election, Wilson Claims.

Time Special
WASHINGTON, July 1. — Congress is cowardly for not passing a far stiffer tax bill than the one proposed and for putting off things now which they know will be done after the November election, Rep. Earl Wilson (R. Ind.) charged today.

The charges are contained in what the Hoosier Republican congressman calls his "Washington News Letter" which is sent out weekly from his office here.

Rep. Wilson himself has been back in the ninth district for nearly two weeks. Here is what his letter says:

"The army supply bill has passed the house and no doubt will be a law before you read this. It provides $42,820,003.067 for the war department alone for the next 12 months and is the largest single appropriation in all history.

"Almost 13 billion dollars of this sum is earmarked for lend-lease. This brings to 68 billion the total amount authorized for gifts under lend-lease alone. I say 'gifts' since our state department now admits that repayment is not expected. This will boost our national debt to over 200 billion by next year. This is more than the assessed valuation of the nation which is estimated at 134 billion. This means that revolutionary changes are in prospect for the economic, social and political life of the United States.

Payment Is Problem

"The biggest problem facing congress just now is how to pay this debt. A new tax bill will be introduced early in July and will pass the house promptly. It falls far short of paying the cost. The senate may raise the taxes agreed upon by the house and the tax bill probably won't become law until after the election, although it would be a little cowardly to postpone it. The people know that their tax bill will be great and that many things put off until after election are for political effect.

"Some of the things that are in the cards are (1) rationing of more commodities on a nation-wide scale, (2) drafting of family men and (3) drafting of 18 to 20-year-old youths who register on June 30th."

CONTINUE FIGHT FOR PARK JOB

Members of the Mayor's Committee Again Rap Rooney Ouster.

The mayor's advisory committee on recreation has issued a statement in support of its request that the recently abolished job of assistant city recreational director be restored.

The park board turned down the committee's request after a three-hour discussion Monday night. The committee's statement follows:

"The mayor's advisory committee on recreation came into being because of a generally expressed demand for improved recreation for Indianapolis. After study of the situation, the committee has acted in an advisory capacity to the park board, which is the administrative body for the recreation department.

Service Appreciated

"The park board has, we think, been appreciative of the volunteer service rendered by the committee in analyzing the recreational needs of the community, and the sincere effort to find ways to meet those needs. For the past two years the working relationship between the committee and the park board has, we feel, provided a constructive force for the improvement of the recreation department.

"At this time, the committee has two points which we wish to discuss with the board.

"1. In the spring of 1940, our expanding program indicated the need for an assistant director of recreation, to assume the responsibility for program planning, training and personnel. The park board accepted this suggestion, and the services of Mr. Rooney were obtained.

Feel Need Greater This Year

"In the opinion of the committee, 1942 presents an even greater need for an assistant director of recreation in Indianapolis. In the past two years, Southside, Keystone, Ray st. and Northwest community centers have been opened. We have inaugurated a winter program at Municipal Gardens, provided for a full time program at Christian park, and have co-operated with the school city for a program at School 41.

"The whole summer program has been greatly augmented—nine playgrounds are now lighted, requiring night supervision. In the past few months, the population of Indianapolis has increased enormously, with defense workers and the military forces coming in.

City Services Taxed

"All of the city services and facilities are being taxed to the utmost. The recreation department particularly will feel this strain, for another factor in the situation is the many children whose mothers have gone into defense industries will need and use the parks, playgrounds, and community houses more than ever.

"The permanent staff of the department now numbers 20, a majority of whom are unseasoned workers, since the salary scale does not attract experienced recreational leaders. Naturally such a staff requires constant supervision and guidance. The director is obviously unable to cover this part of the work, along with his duties of administration, public relations, and amateur athletics.

"Another large field of activity claiming the time of the assistant director has been work with neighborhood groups—to stimulate participation and volunteer services. The value of this has been amply demonstrated by the increasing confidence and gratification these groups are showing in their city recreation department.

"The committee is cognizant of mounting governmental costs, and would have welcomed the opportunity to plan with the park board for any possible economies in the administration of the recreation department. However, we do not consider that the abolition of the post of assistant director is a sound economy at this time.

"Therefore, the mayor's committee on recreation wishes to go on record as protesting this move. A committee whose function it is to advise can logically pre-suppose the right of protest when not consulted.

Method Deplored

"The committee deplores the method used by the board in terminating the services of a staff member. Any qualified employee is entitled to an explanation, and a recommendation when his employment is terminated.

"To fail to accord this courtesy is to indulge in poor personnel practice, disastrous to the morale of any business or agency. The result of such tactics is to undermine the confidence of all employees of the department, and to discourage desirable applicants from ever seeking employment with the department.

"To substantiate the stand taken on these two points by the committee, other members have some written evidence to present to the board."
