

Montgomery Waits Until Full Strength Is Massed

By NED RUSSELL
United Press Staff Correspondent

WITH THE BRITISH EIGHTH ARMY IN SOUTHERN TUNISIA, Feb. 28 (Delayed).—The eighth army will burst through the Mareth line and attack the Gabes bottleneck the moment it can. Gen. Bernard L. Montgomery is confident he has enough tanks, guns, men and planes for an overwhelming attack. Montgomery, commanding the eighth army, will not budge until that moment has arrived.

That has been the secret of his success over 1400 miles of desert battleground, from El Alamein to Tripoli.

He and every man in his army knows that the Afrika Korps cannot be finally beaten without the proper preparation.

I flew from El Alamein to Tripoli and drove from Tripoli to the present front, and I know what Montgomery considers preparation. His transport, thousands of vehicles, flows across dusty roads, paved roads and rough sand tracks in endless streams.

Retains Air Superiority

Decisive superiority in the air has enabled Montgomery to move guns, men and supplies forward over great distances in daylight.

Upon this vast preparation depends Montgomery's next blow to help the first army and the American fifth army smash the axis out of Africa.

Advanced elements of the eighth army so far have been only stabbing and probing the Mareth line's defenses.

It now is doubted that Rommel will try to hold the Mareth line against a full-scale assault, and it is expected that he will fall back to the Gabes bottleneck (30 miles to

Gen. B. L. Montgomery

(the north), which is narrower and not so vulnerable to a flanking movement.

Superior in Tanks.

Montgomery's planes now are sweeping constantly over Rommel's forward positions, lines, communications and airfields, but apparently not in full-scale and mainly to prevent the German planes from harassing the eighth army's preparations.

Tough, dusty British veterans of three years of desert warfare agree that the American Gen. Sherman tank has proved the most decisive weapon in driving the axis from Egypt to Tunisia.

The most powerful German tank is the new 56-ton Mark VI, mounting the deadly 88 mm. gun, but its maneuverability is no match for that of the agile American tanks.

SEES U. S. ARMY BEST EDUCATED

Hull Says Criticism of Schools in Training Technicians Unjust.

The United States army has the highest educational level for the greatest number of men of any army ever assembled in the world's history, J. Dan Hull, principal of Shortridge high school, pointed out in his address before the Kiwanis club at a luncheon today in the Columbia club.

He termed unjust the criticism directed at schools for failure to train in advance a sufficiently large number of technicians to meet the demands of the armed forces.

"Dr. Ralph Taylor, head of the testing service of the army's educational service, has illustrated that the armed forces have five times as many auto mechanics and 125 times as many radio technicians as can be absorbed in peacetime economy," Dr. Hull said.

Curriculum Accelerated

He explained the changes being made in the curriculum to put Shortridge on wartime basis. He cited instances where the curriculum was being accelerated to allow students to enter college at an earlier age.

In discussing guidance facilities, he said that 44 per cent of the Shortridge junior boys and one-half of the senior boys and girls have jobs outside of school.

He pointed to a survey at the school which revealed that many upper-class pupils were working 20 or more hours a week and drawing wages from $5 to $30.

Display Courage

"Criticism directed at schools for failure to stress fundamentals, neglects consideration of the fact that most boys and girls complete high school today, whereas in our time, only a few selective pupils received diplomas," he told the Kiwanians.

"I seldom see them (today's students) make mistakes which are not reflections of mistakes made by their elders, and I often see them display courage and fortitude which their elders do not."

Today's War Moves

By LOUIS F. KEEBLE
United Press War Analyst

The slowing of the Russian drive in the South, which may be only temporary, has been offset by a smashing offensive in the North, whose scope is emphasized by the capture of Rzhev, west of Moscow.

The Russians have broadened their winter offensive so that it now is in full swing along the entire front from the Baltic to the Sea of Azov.

Russian strategy, it now is apparent, was not concentrated on the southern drive, which embraced the Caucasus, the Donets basin and the Ukraine. This drive has been slowed partly by seasonal thaws but more so by heavy reserves which the Germans have thrown in to extricate their forces partly pocketed in the Donets basin.

Some of these reserves, if not all, probably were drawn from the northern or north-central fronts. Despite the huge force which was required to save Stalingrad and push the enemy back across the Donets towards the Dnieper, the Russians evidently have no means exhausted their resources.

They had large reserves waiting in the Leningrad region, below Lake Ilmen and west of Moscow. This amazing reservoir of manpower has now been cut loose while the Germans still are strained to the utmost to stem the advance in the South.

The coming of spring may help the Germans halt their retreat in the extreme South, but there still are many weeks of solid winter weather ahead in the North. The Russians apparently are driving for the Baltic states, which brings them closer to Germany than anything but a overwhelming defeat of the Germans in the South could do.

The Germans will have to find fresh reserves to meet the triple threat from Leningrad, the Rzhev section and the South, and Germany already is having manpower difficulty. In view of that, the withdrawal of 12 Italian divisions from the eastern front at this time is somewhat mystifying.

For Joyful Cough Relief, Try This Home Mixture

Real Relief. Big Saving. So Easy. No Cooking.

This splendid recipe is used by millions every year, because it makes such a dependable, effective medicine for coughs due to cold. It's so easy to mix—a child could do it.

From any drugist get 3/4 ounces of Pinex, a special compound of pure ingredients in concentrated form, well-known for its soothing effect on throat and bronchial membranes. Then make a syrup by stirring 1/2 cup of granulated sugar and one cup of water a few moments, until dissolved. It's no trouble at all. No cooking needed. Or you can use corn syrup or liquid honey, instead of sugar syrup.

Put the Pinex into a pint bottle and add your syrup. This gives you a full pint of very effective and quick-acting cough medicine, and you get about four times as much for your money. It never spoils, and is very pleasant—children love it.

You'll be amazed by the way it takes hold of coughs, giving you a delightful relief. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membrane, and helps clear the air passages. Money refunded if not pleased in every way.
