At long last, he yielded and became a soloist with the Philadelphia Civic Opera Co. and made his first appearance as an opera singer with the Philadelphia symphony orchestra in an opera written and directed by the late Victor Herbert.

The pastor attaches significance to the fact that he was three times pronounced dead during illnesses of a delicate childhood. He was the youngest of his mother's 13 children, one of whom she earnestly prayed would enter the ministry. Throughout his musical career, he says he felt a lack due to his resistance to becoming a clergyman.

Trinity Methodist Recruits Youths to Aid Home Front

By EMMA RIVERS MILNER

Even though you are only 9 years old, you may register in the new employment bureau in the Trinity Methodist church and actually get a job!

The bureau proposes to find paid work for children, between the ages of 9 and 16, an original idea of the church pastor, the Rev. E. P. White. Finding employment for children is part of an extensive war-time program, with features for all ages and faiths, now being launched by the church.

A child can do odd jobs of light work, pull weeds, wash dishes, dust furniture and mind the baby while mother goes to the store to spend her ration points, the pastor holds. Since the Bible teaches that "the laborer is worthy of his hire," the younger generation deserves cash for its efforts.

'Clean Up' Neighborhood

Trinity is sponsoring also a general "cleanup" of the neighborhood for the purpose of providing victory garden plots on vacant lots and to create beauty where untidiness now exists. Men of the church will cultivate the gardens employing the children as helpers.

When Rev. White came to Trinity Methodist church, on Division st. near Olive ave., some months ago, he saw an unusual number of boys and girls wandering aimlessly about the streets and lingering in the stores. And he made up his mind forthwith to change that picture and find them something interesting to do and somewhere to go.

Morning Bible School

All morning during the summer, the church will conduct vacation Bible school classes in preparation for the work the children will do in the afternoons. However is not required of those registering with the employment bureau. The period of the school is much longer than most Indianapolis vacation schools which are usually open from 10 days to three weeks in the summer.

At Trinity vacation school, Bible stories will be told, hymns sung and studied, an orchestra organized and classes taught in drawing and the "little trades." By little trades, the pastor means, cleaning and sharpening lawnmowers, and in making such things as bird houses, flower boxes, tables and the like.

A great cry is going up for nursery schools to care for the small children of women working in the war industries. If a sufficient number of the mothers in his community signify their wish for such a school, the Rev. White will attempt to get one financed in the Trinity church, he says.

A program so full of freshness as his, so well adapted to the needs growing out of the war, naturally arouse interest in the personality behind it. Rev. White abounds in energy and friendliness. His church is "with" him in the program and William Clifton is his able assistant, he says.

Pastor a Machinist

The pastor was a machinist in the Pennsylvania coal mines, where he went to work at the age of 13, when his singing voice was discovered by the late Evan Williams, noted tenor. Mr. Williams urged young White to make a career of vocal music. Following his advice the young singer went to Philadelphia, combining work with study in order to meet his expenses.

He became a soloist with the Philadelphia Civic Opera Co. and made his first appearance as an opera singer with the Philadelphia symphony orchestra in an opera written and directed by the late Victor Herbert.

New Service Is Added By Rev. Ranes

North Baptist to Meet Needs of Growing Community.

The North Baptist church will launch a new worship service tomorrow to meet the needs of a growing membership in a growing community. The Rev. Harold W. Ranes is pastor.

Instead of the one morning service heretofore held each Sunday morning, there will be two, beginning tomorrow, with the Bible study period between. The first worship service will open at 9:30 a. m. followed at 10:30 by the Bible study and at 11:25 by the second worship hour.

The Rev. Mr. Ranes has pointed out that the Bible study hour has been arranged so that all who attend the worship services may also enjoy the benefit of it. Those coming for the early service may simply remain in their seats, while those who prefer the later worship service will need simply to come somewhat earlier to be present for the Bible hour.

Collection Plate Not Passed

North Baptist church is noted among the churches of Indianapolis because of its unique financial procedure. The collection plate is never passed at services. Instead, the membership drops the freewill offering into stationary boxes placed here and there in the church. In the last three years, since the Rev. Mr. Ranes has been pastor, both the pastor's salary and gifts to missions have about trebled.

The pastor, an official of the congregation visited the homes in the community this week and invited the people to attend the morning services and also the adult and youth fellowships at 8:30 and worship at 7:30 p. m. each Sunday. A booklet was left in each household describing the April program of the church.
