Ju Sung-Su Travels Month To Attend Indiana U. Course

Times Special
BLOOMINGTON, July 5.—Lithe, handsome and intelligent, Ju Sung-Su comes to the Indiana university law school at Bloomington as a representative of the Chinese government.

He has been on the campus several days. His is a reticent nature, and he talks only when spoken to. But when he does converse his English is nearly perfect, though he smiles and apologizes for his "poor grammar."

His recent trip from his homeland is a record of air-borne adventure. He believes that the benefits of our country will far more than compensate him for the barriers he overcame in reaching the United States.

An average Chinese college student would not be permitted to make the journey here in such stringent times, but Ju is not just an average student. Besides having a brilliant record at the University of Soochow in Chungking (formerly in Shanghai), he is a personal friend of Generalissimo and Madame Chiang Kai-shek.

The day he left Chungking by plane he discussed at length his visit and its objectives in America with Generalissimo Chiang in the latter's headquarters.

Flew for 12 Days

It was through Chiang's influence that Ju was able to make the trip. His flying time from Chungking to Miami was 12 days. But it actually took him over a month to complete the journey.

He departed from Chungking around the first of April. His plane first set down in Iraq. Then he flew to Egypt, then across Africa to its west coast. Next he came by clipper to South America and finally to Miami on May 15. From Miami he came by train to New York, then to Indianapolis. From there he rode a bus to Bloomington. At each foreign stop-over there were many days of waiting to make the next connection.

Ju's previous education was all in China. He has completed courses there comparable to our grade school, high school and college. At Indiana university he is studying our social security system, and in all probability will go back to China some day to help inaugurate such a system for his own people.

"Yes," he says, "the studies are hard. I find that I need to study consistently, and my English is somewhat of a handicap." He does have trouble getting the gist of a fast-talking Hoosier, but he always believes it, too, now that he's here.

Ju Sung-Su

manages to make enough out of it to give an answer.

Ju is shy. Posting for a photograph embarrassed him.

Ju says the Chinese people have no intention in giving up the battle against the Jap invader.

"China needs more planes, machine guns and other war materials—but even if we don't get them, we will beat the Japs with what we have," he says.

He disliked leaving his mother and father in Chungking, but he believes that in getting this education he some day will be an aid to his people.

Ju is not married. That is, he adds, with a sheepish smile, "not yet."

Asked why he selected Indiana university, he explains that many of his friends in Chungking recommended it as one of the best in America. And he says that he believes it, too, now that he's here.

WE SALUTE THEM

INDEPENDENCE
DAY... 1943

On the Honor Roll of the Indiana Bell Telephone Company are the names of 394 men and 30 women who formerly worked side by side with us. Today, they are serving with the armed forces—from the Mediterranean to the South Pacific.

We miss these men and these women who have answered the call to the colors. Our hopes and our prayers are with them wherever they may be. We are determined to carry on, in their absence, the same spirit of public service that they helped to build in our organization. We recognize that America relies upon effective telephone communication as never before.

We all look toward the day when the telephone wires will sing with the news of Victory, and our men and women in uniform will, like yours, be coming home again to take their places in a free and peaceful world.
