

WHAT OF WOMEN AFTER THE WAR?

Bureau Studies Problem of the Millions Who Will No Longer be Needed in Industry After Axis Is Destroyed.

By FRED W. PERKINS
Times Special Writer

WASHINGTON, July 20.—The women—the millions of them called on to do "men's work" in this war—may not have the historical last word on how their competition in a crowded labor market is to be adjusted when peace comes and much of the armed forces steps out of uniform, but at least their demands will be recorded for official and public consideration.

This is assured by plans of Miss Mary Anderson, head of the women's bureau of the U. S. department of labor, who said today that efforts will soon be made to gather a liberal cross-section sampling of intentions and wishes among the 17,000,000 employed women in this country—practically one-third of the entire present working force.

The "woman problem in readjustment of labor conditions after the war will be far more important than after world war I because:

Their numbers now are much greater; they have become expert at occupations for which it was heretofore assumed their sex disqualified them; they have had a quarter century since the other war for improvement of their economic and competitive position; and they now have the right to vote in presidential and congressional elections, which they did not get until 1920, after world war I.

In addition they now have an aggressive governmental agency, the women's bureau, promoting their interests. This bureau has just celebrated its 25th birthday, having been started as the emergency women in industry service in 1918, and among its accomplishments are considerable victories in winning acceptance for the doctrine of "equal pay for equal work."

Has Long Record
Miss Anderson, who came to this country as a Swedish immigrant girl of 18, became head of the women's bureau soon after its beginning. She had been an operator in a Chicago shoe factory. She was a local president and the only

VETERANS TELL OF NEED FOR RECORDS

Three purple heart wearers from Billings general hospital told of limited recreational facilities and the need for phonograph records overseas at a meeting of Irvington post, 38, of the American Legion recently.

They were Pts. Warren Roberts and Marvin Wajahn, members of some of the first troops to land at Casablanca, and Pvt. William Goff, who was wounded on Guadalcanal. The Irvington post has placed collection boxes in drug stores in the eastern section of the city where records may be brought.

Airsickness Is Problem in Carrying Troops by Plane

By Science Service

BALTIMORE, July 20.—Preventing air-sickness is one of the problems of air transport of troops, it appears from a report by Cmdr. Leon D. Carson, U. S. navy; Dr. Walter R. Miles of Yale university school of medicine, and Dr. S. S. Stevens of Harvard, to the Federation of American Societies for Experimental Biology, here.

"To arrive at the scene of battle with a load of thoroughly ill troops contributes nothing to fighting morale and effectiveness," they comment. This unfortunate situation can, to some extent, be prevented, they believe, by giving the troops a chance to look out of the transport plane or glider.

Factors contributing to air-sickness are the unavoidable motion stimulation of the vestibular mechanism of the ear, rapidly changing forces of gravity, acting on internal organs, muscles and joints, and apprehension and past unhappy memories of plane travel.

"All of these upsetting stimuli are, as a rule, less disturbing," the scientists declare, "if those affected can see out and establish visual contact with the horizon, with cloud

Rushing Air Makes Gliders Too Noisy for Conversation

By Science Service

BALTIMORE, June 20.—Contrary to popular notion, the inside of a glider is a very noisy place, even though glider planes have no engines and no propellers. Conversation is difficult if not impossible when the glider is moving at about 150 miles an hour.

Air turbulence is the reason Cmdr. Leon D. Carson, U. S. navy; Dr. Walter R. Miles, Yale university school of medicine, and Dr. S. S. Stevens, Harvard university, reported to the Federation of American Societies for Experimental Biology here.

In an airplane, part of the noise is due to the "thunderous" agitation of the air by the propeller. Bad enough when a thousand horsepower is fed into the propeller, this din is actually more than double when the engine delivers 2000 horsepower, because "as the tip speed of the propeller increases, a larger proportion of its driving energy is converted into sound."

The noise from this air blustering about the plane is more of a problem in some respects than the noise from the propeller itself, and is what makes the inside of a glider so very noisy.

COURT TO DECIDE 'INTENT' OF BUND

SAN FRANCISCO, July 20 (U.P.).—The German American Bund goes on trial in federal court today in a unique action to determine if the organization advocated disloyalty to the United States.

Bringing the bund itself to the bar was effected by prosecution collectively of 28 persons whose citizenship the government seeks to revoke on charges of disloyalty.

After the mass trial of the 28 alleged bund members, all of German ancestry, each will be prosecuted individually to establish whether he is guilty or innocent of the charges.

One of the defendants is Gottfried Karl Hein, leader of the bund in San Francisco and once highly regarded by Adolf Hitler.

The FBI said Hein went to Germany in 1938 as a bund representative. He visited with Hitler and attended the National Socialist (Nazi) party day congress in Nuremberg.
