Milady's Girdle Scheduled For Snappy Comeback Soon

By BETTY MacDonald
Times Special Writer

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2.—As soon as scientists can control the odor, color and quality of synthetic neoprene elastic thread, milady's girdle is scheduled to make a snappy comeback, according to WPB textile experts.

The war production board has selected seven hosiery manufacturers to conduct tests in making elastic yarn from synthetic rubber. Added to these findings will be the research of scientists in scores of laboratories. The result will probably mean an earlier return of elastic in webbing form to civilian markets.

The experimenters, working with neoprene, report the following difficulties: The odor of synthetic rubber is not pleasing and so far they haven't been able to remedy it, the color is still black, and they must find a way to bleach the elastic to white or pink; some women's skins are allergic to the synthetic rubber, which causes rashes. The one bright thing about neoprene is that it retains as good a "kink" as natural rubber.

No Butter Shortage

THAT JUMP in butter points doesn't mean a butter shortage, according to OPA, but is just a precautionary measure taken to assure the public that there won't be a shortage. Until now we've been buying butter about 5 per cent ahead of allocation, and the increase in point values is figured to bring civilian consumption down to normal.

Odds 'n' Ends

DESPITE the fact that there'll be a 10 per cent increase in beef in the market, it won't be felt soon in civilian circles because the army will be buying large quantities. . . . Approximately 75,000 volunteer workers throughout the country will be working this next week on the task of processing and mailing war ration book 3 to people who sent their applications on or before June 10.

PASTOR SPEAKS AT GRADUATION

Dr. Rothenburger Assails Nazi Teachers in Talk To Butler Students.

Germany's educational philosophy of ignoring the influence of the home and church has led her astray, Dr. William F. Rothenburger, pastor of the Third Christian church, told 76 Butler graduates at summer school commencement Saturday afternoon.

"Three things largely determine the strength of a nation," Dr. Rothenburger said, "its schools, its homes and its churches."

He said that 90 per cent of Germany's youth were trained as slaves to follow the selected 10 per cent trained to lead.

Ross Confers Degrees

Dr. Rothenburger said that Butler university, like other American institutions, offered liberal arts and religion, the practice of a philosophy that educated the spiritual attributes inherited by the individual.

In this era of the state university the church and state still are dependent upon each other's needs, he said.

"Education without religion makes only a clever devil," Dr. Rothenburger said.

Commencement exercises were held in Sweeney chapel. Dr. Frederick D. Kershner, dean of the college of religion, gave the invocation and benediction.

Dr. M. O. Ross, president of Butler, conferred the degrees.

ASKS REVISION OF FEDERAL INSURANCE

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2 (U. P.).—The C. I. O. last night reasserted its demand for a unified federal unemployment insurance system to replace the existing "piecemeal and wholly inadequate" state systems.

In its monthly bulletin, the economic outlook, the C. I. O. said unification of unemployment insurance is particularly necessary as a result of the dislocations of war.

THREE ARE TREATED FOR FOOD POISONING

Sol Meshulam, 47, 812 E. 46th st., his son, Charles, 13, and daughter, Norma, 8, received treatment at City hospital last night for food poisoning.

Mr. Meshulam said the poisoning was caused from eating corned beef and pickles.

Receive Butler Degrees With Honors

Here's Prevention, Cure Of Summer Chigger Bites

By DR. THOMAS D. MASTERS

SUMMERTIME and out-of-doors are very nearly synonymous for most people who look forward for many long, dreary months to the pleasures of picnicking, swimming, hiking and gardening that summer ushers in. Considerable damper can be thrown on enthusiasm for summer, however, with the appearance on the scene of numerous pests and insects, particularly chiggers in a rainy spell. Even

Dr. Masters

Ing, such as a belt or garter, the red marks are thick and itching is particularly insistent. Sleep is almost impossible, and the discomfort lasts three or four days. The most effective methods of preventing chiggers consist of wearing clothing with close cuffs at wrists and ankles, and of dusting oneself liberally with powdered sulfa before walking in woods and fields. Chiggers shun the smell of sulfa.

How to Get Relief

If, however, one is so unlucky as to serve an unwilling host to chiggers, there are certain ways to get relief for an hour or two at the height of the itching, and thus acquire one's quota of sleep. First, one should strip himself of garments, and scrub thoroughly the affected places with soap and water. Rubbing alcohol applied three times a day, followed by boric acid ointment U. S. P. with 1 or 2 per cent phenol should prove soothing. Even simpler is an application of plain gasoline or carbon-tetrachloride, which readily dries up the chigger wounds. The most serious hazard from chigger bites, which

VICTORY GARDENER'S WEEKLY ALMANAC

By A. A. IRWIN

I want to challenge the statement made by the gentleman from Batesville that, "in 25 years from now, new gardeners will begin to go places." I agree that experience is the best teacher, but we need food today as well as 25 years hence. Most new Victory Gardeners are justly proud of their accomplishments this year. Vegetables on the table and in the cans is proof to me that gardeners at least—"begin to go places" in one year.

Many gardeners will be cleaning off the old plants of early corn, beans and other crops that are through producing, preparing the soil and seeding fall crops this week. The fine rains we have had during the past week will make the soil easier to prepare and aid germination of new seedlings.

Cos lettuce, bibb lettuce, Chinese cabbage, kohlrabi, late turnips, beets, carrots and snap beans may be planted this week. An exceptionally early frost may kill the beans before they are through bearing. All other vegetables listed above will not be killed by a light frost.

Onions and early potatoes, two of our staple vegetables, are now being harvested. When the potato vines are dead the potatoes should be dug. Onions should be pulled when the tops have fallen over and dried. After the tops have practically died, both of these crops should be harvested and not left in the hot soil to spoil.

After onions are pulled out of the ground to dry for a day or two, then the tops are cut off one inch from the bulb. Place the onions in slatted crates and store in shed where the air can circulate freely. Potatoes require a cool, fairly damp, storage and for most home gardeners this will mean the basement.

Victory Gardeners are urged to make every effort to conserve seed. Sweet corn, onion and parsnip seed will keep for a year if stored under good conditions. Carrot and parsley seed will be good, if properly stored for three years. Beet, pepper, pumpkin, squash and tomato seed are good at least four years. Cabbage, broccoli, cauliflower, brussels sprouts, cucumber, endive, radish, spinach and turnip seed may be safely planted for five or more years.

Many gardeners want to know if they can save their own vegetable seeds. The home saving of bean seed is a common practice, but to beans may be added tomatoes, beets, carrots, peas, radishes, lettuce and all the greens. It is not advisable to save cucumber seed or any of the other vine crops where these are grown close together for they cross. The same is true of sweet peppers too close to hot peppers. Do not save your own sweet corn seed.

ABC ADOPTS LIQUOR PRICE REGULATIONS

Neil D. McCallum, commissioner of the alcoholic beverages commission, said today liquor retailers who violated maximum price features of office of price administration regulations would be liable to license revocation. The commission has adopted and supplemented the OPA maximum price features, he said, to insure ceiling prices during the present liquor shortage. McCallum said the move would not interfere with or replace enforcement work of the OPA.

It may be that somewhere on this troubled earth . . . there are thinner, opener hats than these. (Perhaps in the interest of Science we should borrow some precision gauges from Allison . . . to see whether these Buri Braid hats are thinner than the Bakus.)

They have a lot of stamina. . . . They are something that a man likes to have in contact with his cranial curves.

And it's one of the BEST HAT VALUES that he has ever met up with!
