TRAFFIC VIOLATORS 'POTENTIAL KILLERS'

Traffic violators are potential killers, handling weapons four times as dangerous as the murderer's gun, Judge John L. Niblack told the National Safety Congress in Chicago today.

"Last year in the United States 7569 people were murdered, but 28,200 persons were killed in traffic," he said. "Murder in most states is treated as a serious matter, while traffic mishaps are treated as accidents six times out of seven and in the remaining case as involuntary manslaughter. Yet the loss to family and society is exactly the same."

Judge Niblack said the public alone could stop "this frightful waste of human life" by observing the traffic laws and by insisting on swift, impartial arrest and punishment of violators.

"This is a problem in education," he said.
