

Victory Group
O. K.'S TYNDALL

Endorses Mayor for Governor, Lauds Army, Business Experience.

City hall's political vanguard, the Victory committee, today threw its campaign weight behind Mayor Tyndall in a formal endorsement of his candidacy for the gubernatorial nomination.

Although the committee is composed of top-ranking Tyndall administration electioneers, it has fostered the impression that its activities are not controlled from the mayor's office.

Advised of the committee's not-too-surprising announcement, Mayor Tyndall replied: "I greatly appreciate the action of the Victory committee in its endorsement of me as a candidate for governor. The proposal, coming from a group so sincerely interested in good government, is one in which any Hoosier would take pride."

Mayor's Record Praised

The highly commendatory endorsement described Mayor Tyndall as "the strongest candidate available for nomination for the governorship of the state of Indiana."

It lauded the mayor's experience as "a military leader and business executive" and suggested that he "can be depended upon to view with sympathy and understanding the problems of service men returning to civilian life." It likewise claimed that he had "demonstrated his capacity as an executive by his accomplishments as the chief executive of Indianapolis."

The political-minded Victory committee made an apparent bid for the rural vote, by citing the fact that Mayor Tyndall, "being the owner and operator of two Indiana farms, can be depended upon to give careful consideration to the problems of agriculture."

Served in Three Wars

The endorsement further praised the mayor's views on democracy and free enterprise, implied that he would, if elected, spearhead a return to the "fundamental principles of constitutional government, and commended him for achieving success "socially and economically," despite the handicap of beginning his career "without any of the advantages usually associated with wealth and opportunity." Mayor Tyndall's military exploits, covering three wars, were likewise listed.

RED, BLUE STAMP DATES ANNOUNCED

WASHINGTON, March 16 (UPI)—O.P.A. today announced dates on which additional red and blue ration stamps become valid for buying meats, fats and processed foods.

Under the ration token plan, blue and red stamps are worth 10 points each. Five blue stamps for processed foods become good on the first of each month and may be used for approximately 12 weeks. Three red stamps are validated automatically every two weeks and may be used from nine to 12 weeks, depending on validation dates.
