HAROLD OWINGS FACED JAP FIRE

Local Marine Went Ashore On Atoll Despite Resistance.

Marine Cpl. Harold Owings, son of E. C. Owings, 5131 E. Walnut st., was one of three members of a marine corps personnel classification section that went ashore on Ennubir island, Kwajalein atoll, in the Marshall islands, while bullets were still flying as the leathernecks' fourth division invaded the atoll. Cpl. Owings' job was to commute from island to island to get required information that was used in keeping an up-to-the-minute record of casualties according to rank and job for replacement purposes.

Prior to entering the marines in January, 1943, the 26-year-old corporal was employed as field representative for General Motors Acceptance Corp.
