BRITISH MOVE BEYOND CAEN

Reach Point 1/2 Mile From Orne Line; Yanks Also Gain.

Nazis were hammered by main strength. A spokesman, however, emphasized that the Germans still were fighting fiercely all along the Normandy front, but had been obliged to throw in reserves they had been trying to build up for a showdown. It was emphasized that wherever the Nazis were giving ground, they were doing so by orderly withdrawals, and nowhere was there a sign of disorganization in the enemy ranks or large scale disengagement. With the seizure of Point 112 between the Orne and Odon, the British were able to command the highway running south and slightly west from Caen to Thury-Harcourt, leaving only the Caen-Falaise highway in German hands and relatively free of interference. In the immediate area of Caen, which fell yesterday, German strong points which had been bypassed in the final assault on the city were being cleaned out systematically.

Germans Counter-Attack

West of Caen the Germans counter-attacked along the Caumont-Tilly-sur-Seulles line, but were held everywhere. A front dispatch said British armor, including Churchill and Sherman tanks, ranged the Odon-Orne corridor. The Americans who captured Sainteny pressed on down the road from Caumont toward Periers, the road hub controlling the territory between St. Lo and the west coast. To the northwest, the Germans counter-attacked strongly in the area of La Haye-du-Puits, captured yesterday, but the Americans beat off the blows and destroyed a number of enemy tanks.

The Nazi command was revealed to have thrown in against the Americans on the La Haye sector the 2d SS panzer group, which had been held in semi-reserve southeast of Caumont.

Bridge May Be In Sight

A headquarters spokesman said the final stages of the British advance into Caen were so rapid that the Germans were not believed to have had time to destroy all the bridges across the Orne. The liberation of Caen cleared away one of the strongest obstacles on the highway and railway from Cherbourg to Paris, 120 miles to the east, and gave the allies a first-class port which had a peacetime capacity of 2,000,000 tons of cargo a year. Caen, the largest city yet captured by the allies in France, had a peacetime population of 50,000, some 20,000 more than Cherbourg. Once well across the Orne allied armor can fan out across rolling country without a natural defense obstacle for 20 miles. Any German attempt to make a stand short of a ridge running northwest from Falaise, 20 miles southeast of Caen, to the Caumont area was expected to touch off an armored battle that may determine the length of enemy resistance in western France.

Mass of Ruins

Caen is little more than a crumbling mass of ruins, but its port installation and the Orne canal, leading seven miles northward to the sea, are believed largely intact. American bulldozers cleared away the rubble of masonry, bricks, glass and wood to permit tanks to enter the city. Snipers were found in almost every building, but they quickly were being routed out. A number of German tanks and motor transports found abandoned without fuel, and reports that the Nazis were running short of fuel in Normandy.

U. S. TO RECOGNIZE PRO-TITO CABINET

WASHINGTON, July 10 (U. P.).—The United States will recognize the newly formed pro-Tito Yugoslav government in London despite the refusal of the Yugoslav ambassador here to recognize it or to resign his post, well informed diplomatic sources indicated today. Constantin Frutich, Yugoslav ambassador to the United States since 1935, has denounced the new cabinet formed by Dr. Ivan Subasic as unrepresentative and as "obviously against all democratic principles."

Away sped the porker, swish went Ruby's stick, embedding itself not in the hog's hide, but in a stray tin can instead. Sparks caused by the grinding friction set ablaze a dry haystack nearby. Loss of the hay cost Ruby $30.

SIX SCRANTON OPA CHIEFS SUSPENDED

will be sent to the U. S. attorney's office. Woolley instructed Walter C. Young, acting director of the Harrisburg district of OPA, to take over the Scranton district office. The suspended officials were: W. Frank Snyder, district director; Arthur A. Maskery, district rationing executive; Paul F. Gibbons, acting district enforcement attorney; Henry C. Walsh, district rationing representative; Joseph A. McNulty, district board operations executive, and Raymond Heppelwhite, district shoe rationing executive.

Woolley said he had instructed Paul L. Ross, regional attorney, to continue his investigation of the officials and of the merchants involved, and directed him to present evidence gathered by the OPA to the U. S. attorney at Scranton, as basis for criminal charges against five persons. The six accused officials were given five days to answer administrative charges looking toward removal from office.

The investigation of the board, Woolley said, disclosed a shortage in gasoline coupons amounting to over 300,000 gallons; a shortage of several thousand shoe stamps and more than 1000 food rationing certificates. Traffic in sugar certificates and illegal issuance of shoe certificates in excess of 7000 pairs also were revealed by the investigation, Woolley said.

recognition, involving the exchange of ambassadors, it appeared probable that De Gaulle will be permitted to go ahead with his plans without objection from this country. Questioned on the subject of a plebiscite, which Mr. Roosevelt has indicated will be necessary before this country would formally recognize any French government, De Gaulle said the matter was not discussed—"because," he added, "that is a purely French question."

STATE TO STUDY AVIATION PLANS

Governor Asks Meeting to Discuss Regulations If Needed.

Governor Schricker today asked the state Chamber of Commerce to call a state-wide meeting of all persons interested in post-war aviation to consider the many legislative questions that will arise from the fast-growing industry.

Study Future Needs

Some of the questions the governor said should be discussed were the question of eminent domain in connection with the establishment of airports; whether state regulation of construction and maintenance is desirable and if so, to what extent; whether there should be state regulation of intrastate air transportation and by what means can the state best proceed to encourage and develop air transportation to serve the future needs of its citizens.

Open to All

"I feel that the meeting should be open to all citizens who are interested in this vital subject," the governor said in his letter to Clarence A. Jackson, executive vice president of the state chamber. "Many feel that definite plans should be made now for careful handling of any legislative questions that may arise in connection with this rapidly growing method of transportation of persons and property."

Wilno Is Nearly Encircled, Nazis Say; Russ Reach Bug

stok-Grodna-Wilna-Daugavpils line. Marshal Konstantin K. Rokossovsky's 1st White Russian army already was threatening to turn the Bug-Daugavpils line as a result of its breakthrough to the Bug. Field dispatches said Rokossovsky's left wing had "established contact" with big enemy forces trying to hold the water barrier. A crossing at this point would outflank Brest Litovsk, some 70 miles to the north, and open the gates to Warsaw, 150 miles to the northwest.

Advance Mile an Hour

Rokossovsky's central column, advancing at a rate of a mile an hour through the center of the Pripiet marshes, seized Osmetrovo, 17 miles southeast of Pinsk, and Kaucha Gorodok, nine miles east of Luminic. His northern wing pushed 13 miles southwest of newly-liberated Baranovice along the Baranovice-Brest Litovsk railway and captured Lesnaya. Gen. Georgi Zakharov's 2d White Russian army, taking over from the 1st army west of Baranovice, advanced 21 miles in 24 hours and captured Magaryevichi, 70 miles east of Bialystok.

One hundred and twenty persons still were in hospitals, 20 of them in critical condition. Several were not expected to recover. Relatives and friends attended community services for all victims last night in Christ church, and in all churches of the city prayers were said during the morning and evening services and names of the dead were read from the pulpits.

Yank Fliers Use 'Secret Weapons'

WASHINGTON, July 10 (U. P.).—U. S. 14th air force dive-bomber pilots in China were revealed today to have devised a "secret weapon" of their own during the battle of Changsha. During a bombing and strafing attack against Jap troops and supply boats, an American pilot released a belly tank full of gasoline.

Another pilot pumped tracer bullets into the falling tank which exploded and destroyed several boats, causing some of the 1000 casualties inflicted on the enemy in that operation.

PITTSBURGH, July 10 (U. P.).—The death toll of the tornado which swept through western Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Maryland, June 23, was raised to 100 today with the reported death of Stephen Harrison, 65, of Chartiers.
