Firm O. K.'s Steering Gear on Crash Bus After Probe

in the right hand lane at Kentucky ave. and Missouri st. This does not mean the central portion now used by trackless trolleys but the lane to the right of the central portion inbound and outbound. This is a narrow lane and the operation through this underpass should not exceed five miles per hour," the second order read.

The bus yesterday, which was carrying 39 passengers, was in the correct lane when it crashed into the girder, ripping off the front end of the bus a third of the way back.

The death meanwhile of Omar Henderson, 34, of 1515 Bradbury ave., ended the railway company's 18-year record of no passenger fatalities. Mr. Henderson died in City hospital three and a half hours after the crash.

W. Dale Griffith, 48, of 4830 Guilford ave., had both his feet severed above the ankles and W. L. Fox, 1314 N. Beville ave., received head injuries and fractured ribs. Both are in City hospital in a critical condition.

One of Worst in Years

Yesterday's accident was one of the worst in recent years in the history of the Indianapolis Railways. Just two years ago an accident in front of L. S. Ayres & Co. killed several persons when an automobile ran into the front store window.

Indianapolis Railways officials said if a mechanical failure caused the accident, it was due to the wear and tear and heavy passenger loads on busses during the war. The company, they said, has asked the government for new equipment but has been refused on the grounds that need for new equipment in this vicinity is not sufficiently vital.

In the police investigation today Patrolman Robert Dillehay is questioning persons involved in the crash.

Discharged from City hospital after treatment, Mr. Bridges was to appear in municipal court room 4 at 2 p. m. today when he will be tried on charges of reckless driving. He has been a bus operator for the railway company here since April, 1944, and company officials said his record was good.

Clean Up Wreckage

After the wreck, street department and fire station No. 13 workers cleaned up wreckage which was scattered 50 feet in all directions.

Seven ambulance loads of injured were taken to City and Methodist hospitals and private automobiles carried the less seriously injured passengers to physicians and to their homes.

Several persons were roaming the streets in a daze and unable to talk coherently. One passenger was found wandering, his face covered with blood, two blocks from the scene.

Guy Cook, 34, of 34 S. Tuxedo st., arrived home covered with blood and in a dazed condition shortly after 3:30 p. m., telling his wife that he did not know what had happened to him. When he awoke in the evening, he remembered the accident.

He told police he had to run to catch the bus at Illinois st. and Kentucky ave. and was the last to board it before it pulled away. He said he had to stand in the doorway of the crowded coach. Although he remembered the bus approaching the underpass, he remembered nothing of the actual wreck because "everything went blank then."

This was the second bus wreck in a week for John Hale, 1138 Kentucky ave., who was seriously injured. He had been a victim of an accident Sunday night in the 7200 block of W. Washington st., when he received chest injuries. He was released from City hospital Monday and was back again today with a severe scalp laceration.

Born in Somerville

Mr. Henderson, who came to Indianapolis nine years ago, was born in Somerville. He was graduated from Oakland high school and attended business college in Evansville before coming here.

An employee of the Inland Container Corp., he formerly had worked at the Indiana News Co. He attended the Berean Baptist church.

His daughter, Sandra Sharee Henderson, was celebrating her sixth birthday yesterday when the news came of the tragedy. Mrs. Henderson was entertaining neighborhood children at her home. Dr. Philip Hennessey, deputy coroner, released the body to Hisey & Titus mortuary.
