ALLEY OOP

JANE JORDAN

DEAR JANE JORDAN—There are four children in our family. When we were babies our mother and father separated and we were sent to the children's home, then all over the country. We never saw or heard of each other for 13 years. At last we have got in touch with each other. My oldest sister is married and I live with her and work. Our brother is in the army and our youngest sister is staying with a family in Kentucky. She is 17 and would like to live with us. The welfare department will help the folks refuse to give her up. She says she is weeks hard on the farm and pivilages. She also says they treat her roughly and do not love her. They only want her for the work she does. If she comes here we intend to send her back for her last year of high school. We have people to let her come but they still refuse. She says she is going to run off if they keep saying no. Should we go after her in spite of them or wait until she can slip off? We love her very much and want her to have the best, as she is the baby. WORRIED SISTER.

Answer—If the family which claims your sister has legally adopted her, she cannot leave them without their consent until she becomes of age. In most states a girl reaches her majority at 18. I don't know the law in Kentucky.

If they have not adopted her, write to the public welfare department, child welfare division, in the city nearest the farm where the girl lives and explain the situation to them. If you can prove you are able to take care of your sister, the public welfare department will help you restore the family unit. Do not encourage the girl to run away.

under age she could be held as delinquent and might get into trouble. If she is to leave against the family's will, let some adult go after her.

Everything your sister says may be true but you must remember that adolescent girls often get dissatisfied with home and are apt to magnify their troubles. Even those who live with their own parents may revolt and feel they are sadly put upon.

Your sister has suffered considerably from the collapse of her own family and the desertion of her parents. It would be natural for her to enlarge upon her troubles with foster parents in order to get back to her sisters. At least give the foster parents credit for giving her a home when you were unable to do so.

JANE JORDAN.

Put your problems in a letter to Jane Jordan who will answer your questions in this column daily.

JUNIOR POLICE TO MEET

The Junior Police of Garfield park will hold their weekly meeting at 7 o'clock tonight at the Garfield park community house, according to Capt. Robert Humphreys. Plans will be drawn for a hike and swim Sunday at Longacre park.
