

MARSHALL FOR 'CITIZEN ARMY'

Urges Small Professional Post-War Force Backed By Reserves.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2 (U. P.).—Gen. George C. Marshall, warning that a large standing army in time of peace "has no place among the institutions of a modern democratic state," has told post-war army planners that the American army must consist of the smallest possible professional organization backed by trained citizen-reserves.

In a directive issued as basic policy for army officers planning the permanent post-war army organization, Marshall warned, however, that a large army may be needed long after the axis powers fall to establish whatever armistice conditions are agreed upon by the allies.

Marshall said his directive was based on the assumption that congress will approve a system of universal military training.

Two Types of Armies

The chief of staff pointed out that there are two types of military organization through which the manpower of a nation may be developed. The first of these is the standing army system used by Germany and Japan.

"It produces highly efficient armies, but it is open to serious political objections," the directive said. "In a nation maintaining such a system, intelligent opinion as to military policy is concentrated in a special class.

"Under such a system the people themselves are competent to exert only a limited intelligent influence on the issues of war and peace. Under such a system only the brain of a people is prepared for war, there being no adequate provisions for developing the latent military leadership and genius of the people as a whole.

"The second type of military institution through which the national manpower can be developed," Marshall said, "is based upon the conception of a professional peace establishment (no larger than necessary to meet normal peacetime requirements) to be reinforced in time of emergency by organized units drawn from a citizen army reserve, effectively organized for this purpose in time of peace; with full opportunity for competent citizen soldiers to acquire practical experience through temporary active service and to rise by successive steps to any rank for which they can definitely qualify."

THREE-STATE COAL STRIKE THREATENED

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 2 (U. P.).—John L. W. affiliate, notified President Roosevelt last night that the union would comply with the government's order that workers return to their jobs in 10 collieries which have been taken over by the interior department. # POPE FORESEES PEACE BY FORCE

Urges Reforms in Outspoken Message.

VATICAN CITY, Sept. 2 (U. P.).—Pope Pius, in a broadcast message noting the fifth anniversary of the war, offered a 10-point peace program last night, warned against totalitarianism of world wars, advocated social and economic reforms for the common man and acknowledged that force may be necessary—even desirable—to maintain peace.

The message, one of the most outspoken ever delivered from the Vatican, was addressed to the Christian peoples of the world—Catholics and non-Catholics—who he said were shocked at the "road of tears and blood" and the "abyss of misery" brought upon humanity by war.

Although he did not mention communism or Russia, the Pope probably referred to communism in commenting on totalitarian measures.

"Do we, perhaps, intend to perpetuate economic conditions of wartime, whereby in certain countries the state controls all means of production and provides for everybody and everything at the cost of severe discipline?" he asked.

Warning against political extremes at the moment when a new world is about to be created, the Pope emphasized that Christian principles should be the basis of a post-war world and cautioned the people against being led into accepting atheistic principles.

JUDGE ATTACKS BUDGET CHANGE

Rhoads Declares Deletions By County Commission Are Illegal.

Protestations of Judge Mark W. Rhoads of juvenile court were added last night to the long list of attacks against the action of the county commissioners in slashing budget items.

Judge Rhoads protested the alterations in his budgets when he appeared before the county council for review last night.

Judge Rhoads declared "the commissioners had no legal right to change any budget estimate of my court or any other court."

Judge Rhoads submitted a budget calling for salary increases of $10 monthly for seven probation officers and a $600-a-year boost for the chief probation officer. These items were cut out by commissioners and the council now is forced to pass the altered budget since it has been advertised as required by law.

Councilmen said the study of the budget will be completed today and that the levy will approximate the 44-cent levy now in effect.
