By CLINTON B. CONGER
United Press Staff Correspondent
ROME, Sept. 13. — American troops drove northward despite renewed German resistance along the western sector of the Gothic line today, advancing three miles beyond the former seaplane base at Lago di Massaciucoli to reach the outskirts of the Tyrrhenian summer resort and fishing port of Viareggio. In the Adriatic coast sector, the Germans were continuing their fierce resistance against British 8th army troops, with point 449, a crag-like hill 800 yards west of much-contested Gemmano, changing hands several times yesterday. The U. S. 5th army continued its advance north of Florence, taking the town of Larniano, 18 miles north of Florence, and the towns of Foggio Della Dogana and San Toppolino, both 17 miles north of Florence and just west of Larniano. Eighth army troops, who previously had crossed the Sieve river northeast of Florence, have advanced five miles in the last 24 hours, an allied communique disclosed today.
