HUTTON, GRANT
TOGETHER AGAIN

Separation of Seven Weeks

Ends With Statement

To the Press.

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 3 (U. P.)—Dime store heiress Barbara Hutton and her first commoner husband, Actor Cary Grant—who separated less than seven weeks ago and said there was "no chance of a reconciliation"—are together again, they announced today.

In a statement that kept the cause of their rift and their later reunion secret, they said that "we feel sure that the press and public will respect it as being our own affair."

They were reported to be out of town for a few days vacation. Miss Hutton and Grant, who relinquished any claim to the heiress' $40,000,000 fortune when he married her in 1942, first planned a separation last June but put it off, they said, when Count Kurt Haugwitz-Reventlow, her former husband, refused to return her son to her custody.

When they separated, on Aug. 15, Miss Hutton said Grant wanted to stand by her but that "it's unfair to take advantage of his name and protection because I am fighting to hold my child."

Besides Reventlow, Miss Hutton previously was married to Prince Alexis Mdivani.
