

'BETWEEN DEVIL AND DEEP BLUE'

Local Yank Tells How Sub Hung Between Surface And Bottom.

With a nonchalance that comes with knowing there is but once chance and no retakes, Raymond Beach, pharmacist's mate 1-c, 1326 E. Southern ave., today recounted how his submarine hung between the surface and the bottom, out of commission, as units of the Japanese fleet bracketed it with depth charges.

"I can't tell you when, where or the name of the sub," he said, "but for 28 hours we sweated it out while our mechanics and machinists worked on the engines. Our air was good for 40 hours.

"The engines were temporarily knocked out by depth charges. The Japs knew they had hit us and tried to finish off the job.

Their Alternatives

"We could have surfaced, but then we would either have been shelled and machinegunned or taken prisoner. We could have dropped, but then if the engines couldn't be fixed there would have been an awful lot of water over us.

"So we sweated it out. Then they got the engines fixed and we crawled away. That's all there was to it."

A Greyhound bus driver in civilian life, Mate Beach was made into a navy pharmacist. "I guess because we had to know something about first aid as a driver," he said.

He Does His Share

He never has found himself in the predicament of the pharmacist's mate who had to perform an appendectomy or major operation, but he has done his share of patching up the wounded, removing bullets and high caliber shells.

Entering service in September, 1941, he is now spending a 30-day furlough at the home of his sister, Mrs. C. H. Perry of the Southern ave. address.

On continuous sub duty for 26 months in the Pacific, Mate Beach was in on the landings at Tarawa, Saipan and Biak.

His mother, Mrs. Flora Hiner, lives at 444 S. Alabama st.
