JANE JORDAN

Put your problems in a letter to Jane Jordan who will answer questions in this column daily.

DEAR JANE JORDAN—I am 28 and my husband is 32. We have been married 14 years and have a boy of 10. My husband has been in the navy since March. I work 10 hours a day and hardly ever go any place. A friend of ours asked me to go to a dance with her and her husband; so I went and got home at midnight. I write to him every night and tell him everything I do. He wrote back and said he didn't want me to go out like that. It has been like this ever since we have been married. He would get mad if I stopped in town on Monday nights and be an hour late getting home. Is there any way of getting him out of these habits? Would you keep telling him everything I do if he knew it was going to make him mad?

SALON'S WIFE.

Answer—I would tell him only the things which would keep him happy and contented for the duration. You have a right to some recreation while he is away and if your conduct is above reproach, why upset him by telling him every little thing you do for diversion? To be sure this is evasive and does
