use this great rub for
SORE THROAT
COUGHS and COLDS

Wonderful for Grown-Ups, Too!

Ever since they were tiny tots—whenver they were tiny tots—whenver the Quintuplets catch cold—their chests, throats and backs are immediately rubbed with Musterole.

Musterole gives such blessed prompt relief because it's more than just an ordinary "salve." It's what so many Doctors and Nurses call a "modern counter-irritant." It will calloused, congealed tissue, aching chest muscles due to colds, makes breathing easier—but it actually helps break up congestion in upper bronchial tract, nose and throat.

And Musterole is much easier to apply than hard plaster. White, Stainless. Just rub it on! "No fuss. No muss with Musterole!"

IN 3 STRENGTHS: Children's Mild Musterole, Regular, and Extra Strong.

Cologne were reported by the American 9th army.

The British 2d army, however, yielded Hoven, three miles northeast of Geilenkirchen, under counter-attack by panzer grenadier formations.

The Germans also claimed to have captured Beek, four miles northeast of Geilenkirchen.

Another German broadcast asserted that American attempts to establish a beachhead on the east bank of the Roer river, the new German last-ditch defense line before Cologne, had been smashed.

The Germans also said French forces had attempted to take the Rhine bridges at Strasbourg by storm, but had failed.

The broadcast indicated that the French may have driven through the city to the west bank of the Rhine.

Patton Renews Drive

Some 80 miles to the northwest, Lt. Gen. George S. Patton's 3d army tanks jumped off in a new attack three miles inside Germany's Saar basin—just beyond the junction of the French, German and Luxembourg borders.

One column of the 10th armored division captured Oberleiken, nine miles northwest of Merzig. Another fought into the outskirts of Tettigen, two and a half miles to the west.

The advances carried to within a few miles of the outposts of the main defenses of the Siegfried line in the Saar basin.

Rain Hinders Operations

Rain, floods and stiffening enemy resistance combined to slow other allied armies at the northern and southern ends of the 400-mile front almost to a standstill. Some limited gains were reported, however.

The situation, army by army, from north to south was:

BRITISH 2D ARMY—Advanced through mud and minefields to within less than three miles west and southwest and within sight of the border fortress of Venlo in Southeast Holland; Yielded Hoven, three miles northeast of Geilenkirchen, Germany, to enemy counter-attack in toughest fighting since Normandy.

AMERICAN 9TH ARMY—Captured Patten, three miles southwest of Jülich, and fought into Bourheim, one mile southwest of Jülich and 24 miles west of Cologne; remainder of front stationary.

(The London Daily Express quoted a German news agency as saying

JUST BEGINNING RAIDS ON TOKYO!

American troops attempted to cross the Roer river and break into Jülich, one of the main strongholds protecting Cologne.

AMERICAN 1ST ARMY—Advanced west, south and southeast of Weisweiler, nine miles northeast of Aachen and two miles beyond Eschweiler; gained 600 yards in eastern tip of Hürten forest.

(A BBC broadcast heard by NBC said 1st army troops were less than two miles from Duren, companion fortress to Jülich on the Roer river.)

AMERICAN 3D ARMY—Pushed attack along 11-mile front in Saar basin; increased pressure against 3125 Germans holding out in five fortress groups in the Metz area; advanced four miles in the vicinity of Rommelfing, 27 miles south of Saarbrücken.

AMERICAN 7TH ARMY—Captured western half of Strasbourg, advanced half-way through the southern Vosges to within 15 miles of the Alsace plain between Strasbourg and Colmar; captured Le Thillot.

FRANCE 1ST ARMY—Reached Battenheim, four miles north of Mulhouse and 17 miles south of Colmar; occupied Morschwiller-Le Bas, three miles west of Mulhouse; repulsed German counter-attacks southeast of Belfort and in Mulhouse area.

Leclerc's spectacular advance into Strasbourg tightened the allied trap around 50,000 German troops being driven back against the Rhine by the 3d and 7th armies in eastern France.

source of counter-action to the Marion county complaints against them.

They want that district thoroughly investigated if the Marion county probe continues, one of them said.

Commenting on the Indiana inquiry, Senator William E. Jenner, who led the state Republican ticket, said that no doubt plenty of fault can be found on both sides in this—any other election—in Indiana or elsewhere.

"It's just like making out an income tax return," Senator Jenner declared. "No businessman can make one out so that the experts can't find some flaw in it . . . But it seems to me that after you lose an election the best plan is to build for the future so that you can win and not sit around crying about it."

Investigators Here Await Action Order

In Indianapolis, the senate's investigating staff awaited the campaign expenditure committee's authorization for a "formal" full-blown probe of Marion county election fraud charges.

It was understood that the Green committee now has enough "preliminary" material at hand to order a complete and conclusive investigation of conditions leading to widespread confusion over voter registrations on election day.

It likewise was indicated that another probe angle, namely the examination of Senator-Elect Homer Capehart's campaign outfit, was still being pushed.

George Shillito, the senate's No. 1 investigator, was constantly occupied interviewing "persons affiliated with both the Republican and Democratic parties."

here on would go forward rapidly and would "contribute greatly" to the final capitulation of Japan.

"We're Not Afraid"

"We are not afraid to attack in daylight," Hansel said. "We are confident our Superfortresses with their central fire control systems can defend themselves in air combat."

Crewmen of the giant bombers took off with the full knowledge that they would meet plenty of anti-aircraft fire over Tokyo, as it is known that the Japanese have flak batteries capable of reaching the highest levels at which the B-29's can operate.

O'Donnell revealed, however, that the planes that took part in today's strike had been improved as a result of battle experience obtained by the Superfortresses operating from China and India, particularly the engines.

At the same time, Hansel said invaluable assistance had been obtained from reconnaissance photographs taken by the crew of a long B-46 that spent 46 minutes over Honshu on Nov. 1 to pave the way for today's attack.

"We learned more since Nov. 1 about Tokyo than we knew in the last 10 years—well, very nearly so."

Hansel said, paying tribute to the crew of the reconnaissance plane piloted by Capt. Ralph D. Steakley, 25, Jefferson, O., who brought back an amazingly clear set of photographs of Tokyo.

That reconnaissance raid presumably alerted the Japanese and eliminated the surprise element from today's attack, but officers asserted that the information obtained outweighed that disadvantage.

Even as O'Donnell's bombers were roaring out into the air from their new fields on Saipan, American marines and army troops were coming the jungled cliffs and cave-studded mountains for survivors of the formidable Japanese garrison that held this island only five months ago.

Japan might well wish that the imperial high command had used 100 divisions, and the entire imperial fleet to defend the Marianas, so important are Saipan and the other major islands of the group as bases from which American warplanes will help bring the enemy down to defeat.

"I have often appeared on programs and on the same platform with Philip Murray and with other C. I. O. officials, as everyone knows," Tobin said. He said that his reference to labor unions that are "not free" did not include any American unions.

John Brown, delegate from the British Trade Union Congress, will speak today on the British trade union situation and Edward J. Phelan, acting director of the international labor office, will discuss the I. L. O.

Chester Bowles, head of the office of price administration, will deliver the principal speech of the day while Luigi Antonini, New York secretary of the Italian dressmakers union, will discuss the labor situation in Italy.

The convention reconvened following a Thanksgiving holiday, but reports on some 125 resolutions now being considered by 600-odd delegates in executive sessions were not expected before Monday.

Among the considered resolutions was a proposal to boycott the states of Florida and Arkansas as unfair towards organized labor for adopting constitutional amendments outlawing the closed shop, and a proposal for a 30-hour work week.
