Admiral's Wife Seeks Monument for Battle Flags

By ANN STEVICK
NEA Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.

When the boys get home from the high seas and the foxholes they should be able to see and bring their children to see the flags they fought under.

And they should be able to see them displayed in a place of honor specially built for the purpose, says Mrs. Thomas B. Richey, flag-fancier and authority on their history and preservation.

Mrs. Richey is the wife of Rear Admiral Thomas B. Richey, now stationed in Washington, and she's stumping the neighborhood to get people interested in a national monument to display the country's honored flags.

Mrs. Richey is an avowed flag-lover. You'd have to be to stitch eight hours a day for three weeks making the shreds of an 1804 flag into a triumphant whole, strong enough to hang on display for years, stitched with an intricately precise and knowing net stitch that suspends all the weight on a backing of the most durable Irish linen.

This is but one of the 5000 flags this gracious lady with the bright red hair and soft voice has helped to preserve. She grew up surrounded by the flag-fixing activities of her mother, Mrs. Amelia Fowler, whose Boston home was a studio for a life work with flags.

Mrs. Fowler started out studying the Bayeux tapestry and branched into creating original stitches still used by Mrs. Richey, who as Katherine Fowler wasn't too much interested in needlework.

WHEN IN 1920 her mother died, just as Massachusetts passed an act providing for the preservation of all state flags, Mrs. Richey was called from California, where her husband was stationed, to take up her mother's work. She's been at it a good deal of the time since. She presided over a large flag workshop in the New York naval station, and means to set up such a studio with a staff of expert needlewomen in Washington, as soon as she gets an article on original needlecraft creations and a book on the history of flags out of the way. Her projects operate on various congressional and state appropriations.

One of Mrs. Richey's most elaborate restoration jobs was done on the flag given to New York's 7th regiment by the city of Washington in gratitude for protection during the Civil War. There were double layers of cloth, one yellow and one blue, glued together in an effort at preservation. Mrs. Richey got the layers apart, covered each with fine transparent gauze she imports for the purpose and stitched them together so that stitches on one side matched the yellow cloth, on the other the blue, by some kind of needle witchcraft beyond the layman's description.

Mrs. Richey is about to start mounting the flag of the U. S. S. Dakota, known as Battleship X in the secrecy period after Pearl Harbor. It will be a big job to place the shaggy stars, stitched around the burnt and frayed stripes.

But as Mrs. Richey unfolded the browned flag smelling of shell smoke, glared at the desolation and muttered, "Imagine an American flag in that condition," one felt sure it would shape up under her deft hands in short order.

Wartime Eating by Meta Given

AT THE TIME YOU ARE ABOUT TO SPEND your last red point and still have no meat, take a good, courageous look at the pointless variety meats. You have all of them to choose from except beef and veal liver.

If your family is stubborn or squeamish about any of these, perhaps you will be safer to plan their initiation with pork hearts. Then if you follow this recipe for heart pie you can serve it without apologies.

Milk to drink: Three and one-half c. for each child; 1½ c. for each adult. Today's points—8 red for spareribs, 20 blue for peas.

Heart pie: Two pork hearts, 1½ lbs. flour, 1½ tps. salt, dash pepper, 2 tps. margarine, 1¼ c. water, 1 c. cornstarch cut celery, 1 medium onion, sliced, ¼-c. pkg. dried mushrooms, ½ c. sour cream, 1 tsp. sugar, rich biscuit dough.

Wash hearts thoroughly in warm water. Slice to about ¼-in. thickness; discard tubes and tough membrane. Dredge in combined flour, salt and pepper and brown in hot margarine. Reduce heat and add a small amount of water; cover and simmer for 1 hr., or until heart is almost tender, adding remaining water as needed. Add vegetables and continue to cook for about 20 mins. longer. Stir in remaining ingredients, bring to a boil, cover with biscuit dough and bake in 425 degrees F. oven for about 20 mins. Serve immediately. Serves 4.

Melt butter in pan. Add almonds to toast to coat. Let almonds toast over very low heat—frequently tossing and stirring to brown evenly. ## Lt. John Cory, Sally Ballard Are Married

Dr. Jean S. Milner Reads Ceremony

The Second Presbyterian church was the scene, at 4 o'clock this afternoon, of the wedding of Miss Sally Ballard to Lt. John Webster Cory, U. S. N. R.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Ballard, French Lick Springs, and Lt. Cory's parents are Mr. and Mrs. John William Cory Jr., Spencer, Iowa.

Dr. Jean S. Milner, pastor of the church, read the vows before a background of palms, candelabra and an altar bouquet of white gladioli, stocks, snapdragons, carnations and freesias.

The bride was gown in white tulle and tulle. The period neckline was outlined by gathered satin insertion, and the long sleeves formed points at the wrists.

Sister Is Attendant

The full skirt and train were attached to a princess bodice and the bride's tiered veil of English illusion was held by a tiara of Duchesse pearls. White tulips and freesias formed the bridal bouquet.

Mrs. Jackson B. Deffinger, French Lick Springs, her sister's matron of honor, wore mad
