Smash 17 Ships, 600 Planes In 2-Day Raid on Jap Navy

the specific results on the basis of preliminary reports:

JAPANESE SHIPS

Sunk—Six small freighters.
Damaged—One or two battleships, two or three aircraft carriers, two light aircraft carriers or escort carriers, two escort carriers, one heavy cruiser, one light cruiser, four destroyers, one submarine, one destroyer escort and seven freighters.

JAPANESE PLANES

Shot down—200.
Destroyed on the ground—275.
Damaged—More than 100 in first day alone.

JAPANESE GROUND INSTALLATIONS

Destroyed—Hangars, shops, arsenals, oil storage facilities and other installations.

AMERICAN LOSSES

Ships Sunk—None.
Ships Damaged—One seriously, others slightly.
Aircraft—Extremely light.

The toll of enemy warships was the greatest since the second battle of the Philippine sea last October when 24 Japanese warships were sunk, 13 possibly sunk and 21 damaged.

Later reconnaissance may reveal that some of the warships hit in the inland sea later sank.

The Japanese resisted the defiant American challenge to their fleet with the heaviest and most persistent air attack since the air-sea battles off Formosa last September. Guns of the fleet and carrier-borne fighters broke up most of the attacks. Dive-bombers slipped through the barrage to put one ship out of action. It was able to head toward port under its own power, however.

Other American ships which suffered minor damage remained fully operational, Nimitz said.

Spruance in Command

He gave the lie to Japanese claims that seven American warships had been sunk and 183 American planes shot down during the two-day attack.

An additional aircraft carrier was sunk and another damaged yesterday, Tokyo claimed.

Adm. Raymond A. Spruance, commander of the 5th fleet, was in tactical command of the fleet forces engaged in the assault, which covered a 300-mile front of the Japanese homeland.

The assault opened Sunday with a series of attacks which Tokyo said lasted eight hours on Kyushu airfields, southernmost of the Japanese home islands.

With these neutralized, the huge force of at least a dozen aircraft carriers, escorting battleships and smaller warships moved north for the kill—an attack for the first time on the elusive Japanese navy's home lair in the inland sea.

Our Town: Art Now Has U. S. Army Blessing

"Ten Minute Break" by 1st Lt. S. Wright Ludington, Ft. Harrison.

"A Hawaiian Girl" by Tech. 5th Gr. J. B. Grier Jr., Stout Field.

"The Sentry" by T. Sgt. John Gerasimchik, Camp Atterbury.

talent within the army, the special services division conceived the idea of having a nation-wide competition, the participants of which would come from all the service commands interested in the project. At last accounts there were nine such commands with headquarters distributed all over the country.

Our area is part of the 5th service command with headquarters at Ft. Hayes (Columbus, O.). After next Friday our show will go there and undergo another scrutiny along with all the other pictures submitted in that jurisdiction.

The winnowed part will then be sent to Washington where sometime this summer it will be exhibited at the National Gallery of Art. It will hang in the company of all the prize pictures submitted by the other service commands.

Patriots are already predicting that the army arts contest, when finally exhibited in Washington, will reveal a fearlessness not unlike that of the battlefield.

The regional art show you are privileged to see this week was selected by a jury composed of, Donald M. Mattison, chairman; Henrik M. Møller and David K. Rubins. They combed something like 300 entries, picked 50 worthy of prizes.

Some Striking Examples:

Random pickings:
"The Chapel" by Tech. 5th Gr. Harold Stephenson (Wakeman General and Convalescent hospital). Sgt. Stephenson stumbled across this tiny Catholic church (16 pews) while he was in the southwest Pa. cific. He hitched to paint the scene, but discovered that it called for more colors than he had. Dauntlessly he substituted cold cream, tooth paste and shoe polish.

"The Sentry" by Tech. 5th Gr. John Gerasimchik (Camp Atterbury). The water color portrays a solitary soldier ankle-deep in snow. He is frightfully cold. The stern and sullen sky forecasts a grim and bitter night. Realism such as this somehow persuades one that artists profit by first-hand acquaintance with their material.

"Ten Minute Break" by 1st Lt. S. Wright Ludington (Ft. Harrison). The powerful prize drawing is as delicate as a spider's web. Its haunting beauty is not unlike that of poetry. The disciplined hand that held the pencil betrays the artist's background. Investigation reveals that Lt. Ludington enjoyed a year at the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts, two years at the Art Students' League (New York).

"Portrait" by Pvt. Alex Minewski (Billings General hospital). More specifically, it is the portrait of a pretty girl with a neck as swan-like as that of Dante Gabriel Rossetti's Lizzie Siddal. The skill with which the head is connected to her body gives the artist away. Sure enough, Pvt. Minewski received his training in art schools (Detroit and New York).

"A Hawaiian Girl" by Tech. 5th Gr. John R. Grier Jr. (Stout Field). Sgt. Grier, it appears came regularly to the art class of the Illinois st. center, a leisure activity organized by Wilbur D. Peat as far back as 1942. When he got the call to go overseas, Sgt. Grier had to leave most of his belongings behind, including all his art work. The buddies he left behind entered their pal's work in the competition. Sgt. Grier hasn't the least idea what happened to him in Indianapolis this week.

Like as not, the above list doesn't include the picture that impresses you most. In that case, speak up. In any event avail yourself of the opportunity to vote for your favorite. The serviceman whose work wins the "popularity vote" will receive a war bond, a gift of the Illinois st. center.

2 CHILDREN HERE BURNED TO DEATH

for groceries and to the home of her brother, Cecil Sammons, 839 W. New York st. for the iron.

Wiring Blamed

The children were playing in the front room. Apparently only a few seconds or minutes after she left, the fire broke out in the center room. Defective wiring apparently was the cause, firemen said.

All three rooms of the house were destroyed.

Mrs. Smallwood was taken back to her brother's house by her husband where she moaned:

"I want to die, too. I cannot live without my babies."

Charges of child neglect were placed against the couple when police said they had been informed that the Smallwoods had latched the door on other occasions while leaving the house for short intervals.

WACS NOW SERVING ON HOSPITAL SHIPS

Members of the Women's Army corps are now serving on three U. S. hospital ships, the war department disclosed today.

Seven of them have already replaced men as radio operators on the ships. Cpl. Virginia Kidd, South Bend, is one of three WACs serving aboard the Larkspur, the first ship to sail with WAC operators.

Present plans call for the WAC to provide three of a hospital ship's regular complement of four operators. The WACs have their own commanding officer on board with them, a WAC officer who also serves as assistant special service officer for the ship.

ARNOLD IN WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON, March 21 (U. P.).—Gen. H. H. Arnold, commander of the army air forces, returned to Washington today after a five weeks' rest in Florida.

VALPARAISO BUYS DODGE BUILDINGS

VALPARAISO, Ind., March 21 (U. P.).—Expansion of Valparaiso university to handle an anticipated enrollment increase was indicated today by the school's acquisition of facilities of the Dodge Radio and Telegraph Institute.

Established in 1873, the Dodge school closed after training more than 2000 signal corpsmen for the armed forces during the current war. All buildings and equipment were sold to the university, President O. P. Kretzmann of Valparaiso announced.

The buildings will be converted into dormitories for men at an estimated alteration cost of $30,000, Mr. Kretzmann said.

WOMAN 118 DEAD

RIVERSIDE, Cal., March 21 (U. P.).—Funeral services were being arranged today for Mrs. Ramirez Trujillo, who died Monday at the age of 118.
