Good Will Collections Start May 16

This elderly woman, an invalid, repairs clothing donated to Goodwill Industries. Her son, wounded in action, is in a hospital in Europe.

"Good turn day" bags will be distributed by 5000 Girl Scouts, Boy Scouts and Camp Fire Girls for the 8th annual city-wide collection of Indianapolis Goodwill Industries.

The annual "good turn day" collection of discarded furniture, clothing and household goods will take place May 16 when a fleet of 75 volunteer trucks will cover the city and make pickups in the homes.

Scout groups are asking housewives to take at least one "good turn bag" and fill it with clothing and light articles, placing furniture and heavier material aside. All will be picked up on May 16.

15,000 Bags
In last year's drive Howard G. Lytle, executive secretary, reported that 22,000 housewives gave 15,000 bags of clothing and 5000 pieces of furniture. An average bag of clothing or a piece of furniture will provide one-half day's work for a handicapped employee at the Goodwill agency.

A total of 125 physically handicapped men and women are employed now at the agency and three world war II veterans are in training there. The program at the

Who Will Take Berlin, U. S.
Or Reds, Soon to Be Known

By BOYD LEWIS

United Press Staff Correspondent
PARIS, April 18.—The next few days of operations in Germany, it appeared today, will reveal whether the Americans or the Russians will take Berlin.

The swift advance of the U. S. 9th army had given rise to belief the Americans would be the first to march down Unter Den Linden. But with the opening of the Red army offensive the opinion in many quarters was that the Russians will take the Reich capital.

There is considerable mystery regarding the nature and extent of the liaison between Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower and the Russian high command.

Supreme allied headquarters has just reissued Eisenhower's statement at a press conference last February that liaison with the Russians is as good as he could wish for. At the same time a more definite statement on the subject has been given for the information of correspondents.

It has been revealed that an operational boundary line exists, dividing the zones of American and Russian operations. But where that line has been drawn has not been made public.

Gen. Omar N. Bradley has brought his 12th army group forces well up along the Mulde river line. It is not yet clear whether the Mulde is the Russo-American dividing line or whether the line is further east.

However, it is now evident that considerable mopping up and consolidation of positions may be required along the Mulde. Supplies must be brought up over extended lines of communication and this may dictate a brief halt.

Aim to Destroy Armies
It appeared certain that the next operation, of American and Russian forces would be aimed at the destruction of the German armies before they can retire into the so-called southern redoubt.

The "redoubt" is imperilled by the U. S. 7th army's advance into the Nuernberg area as well as the Soviet advance along the Vienna-Linz axis. Such operations could be co-ordinated if the western and eastern armies smashed through the elongated German middle and then wheeled south to pinch off the survivors.

To the north it appeared evident

FRENCH BOY SENDS LETTER ABOUT YANK

A 14-year-old French boy's promise to an American soldier to send home news of him was fulfilled recently when C. M. Hilt, 1214 N. Oakland ave., received a letter from Claude Neveu, 107, Somme, France. Claude wrote the letter at the request of S. Sgt. William Brooks, son of Mrs. Ruby Redwine, 47 N. Hamilton ave., whom he met Sept. 3, "two days after our liberation."

Before he entered the army June 17, 1941, Sgt. Brooks was employed by Mr. Hilt, manager of the Standard Supermarket at 10th and Dearborn sts. He went overseas in January, 1944, and is serving in an anti-aircraft battery of the 9th army.

Mr. Hilt does not read French, so he asked students at Cathedral high school to translate the letter. It says in part, "I wish to tell you how much we Frenchmen appreciate the American generosity since we have been freed from German oppression. With all our hearts, we say 'thank you.'"
