YOUR VICTORY GARDEN... By Henry L. Price Herbs for Flavoring and Fragrance Easily Grown

Many true herbs, like dill, caraway, sage, anise, tarragon, marjoram and savory are good for kitchen use; others, like lavender cotton, rosemary, mignonette and lemon verbena, are grown for their fragrance. Nearly all herbs may be grown from seed, although some are slower to start than others, and it may be better for the novice to purchase started plants. A well-drained soil, not too rich, especially in nitrogen, is the general requirement, as nearly all herbs have a tendency to over-grow and become weedy. Beyond keeping the soil about the plants well cultivated and free of weeds, little attention is necessary.

Most herbs should be harvested when the plant is in its prime—usually just as it comes into bloom. Cut with scissors or a sharp knife, leaving some leaves at the bottom for new growth. More than one crop may be gathered from some herbs.

Spread leaves out on trays or cloths, or tie loosely in bunches and hang up to dry as quickly as possible, but depend on good circulation of air rather than heat.

for best results. Do not dry in the sun. Remove stems and store leaves in air-tight container.

CHURCH RAPS LIFTING OF BAN ON RACING

KANSAS CITY, Mo., May 11 (U.P.).—The government was told today that by lifting the curfew and the ban on horse racing it had "placed racing and entertainment before religion."

The accusation came from the congregation of the Bales Baptist church here. The church members observed that the ban on conventions, including religious meetings, remained in effect despite the elimination of other home front restrictions. They sent their protest to War Mobilizer Fred M. Vinson.
