Would-Be Bandit's Capture Proves Point, Victim Insists

Dr. R. N. Harger, Indiana university toxicologist who was the victim of an attempted hold-up Tuesday night, maintained today that the incident proved what he's been contending all along.

The would-be robber was caught by policemen assigned to accident prevention work. Dr. Harger, who is chairman of the Indianapolis

Chamber of Commerce Safety Council's enforcement committee, said he has been urging that policemen can do both jobs—traffic and crime work.

"I don't say that the police are spending too much time in crime enforcement," said Dr. Harger, "but I do say they should spend spare time on traffic."

The would-be bandit, Grover Casey, 23, of 1324 N. Warman ave., was talked out of taking Dr. Harger's money but was apprehended after an accident at Northwestern ave. and 30th st. He faces charges of vehicle taking, operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of liquor and failure to have a driver's license.

Dr. Harger did not use the drunkometer, which he invented, on Casey but said a blood test showed Casey had three-fourths of a pint of whisky in his body.
