You Don't Have to Be a Millionaire to Need Will Revision

It is a mistake to think that only millionaires need to revise their wills at regular intervals.

No matter how much property you own, you want to dispose of it as you wish. But changes in family situations, business conditions and revisions of state or federal laws may alter your will without your knowing it.

Take no chances that your will may not distribute your property to the persons and in the proportions that you want.

See your lawyer. Have him review your will against the background of your present property and family situations. He will be able to tell you whether your will needs to be brought up to date—and why.

NEW RAT POISON DROWNS PESTS

One Pound Enough to Kill 300,000 Rodents.

By Science Service
WASHINGTON, Oct. 2.—ANTU, a rat poison so powerful that one pound could kill 300,000 rats but which is not dangerous to humans, will soon be available to the public.
Discovered through taste tests in a psychology laboratory, ANTU has been a closely guarded secret during the war. First inkling that security restrictions had been lifted came with publication here in the U. S. Public Health Service's Public Health Reports of a scientific study by Drs. William T. McCloskey, M. L. Smith and R. D. Little of the National Institute of Health.

Credit for the discovery of ANTU as a rat poison, however, goes to Dr. Curt P. Richter, of the Phipps Psychiatric clinic at Johns Hopkins hospital in Baltimore.
The word ANTU is made of the initial letters of the rat poison's chemical name, alpha-naphthyl thiourea. It is a fine gray powder with very little odor or taste. Compared to other rat poisons, ANTU turned out to be twice as poisonous as thallium sulfate and more than 100 times as poisonous as arsenic trioxide and fortified red squill on the basis of the sizes of the killing doses of each.

Produces Dropsy
ANTU has two remarkable features: 1. It acts almost exclusively on rats, leaving humans and most other species unharmed. 2. It kills rats in an unusual way, causing a drop of the lungs so great that the animals are drowned in this fluid from their own bodies. It is the only substance known to produce an edema, or dropsy, that is limited to the lungs.

For rat eradication, ANTU can be used mixed with finely ground corn or wheat; as a spray or dust on fruit or vegetables such as cut-up apples, sweet potatoes, tomatoes, and the like; as a dust, either pure or mixed with flour, on floors and runways; as a dust, on the surface of water where rats are likely to drink; or blown as dust into rat holes and burrows with standard dust pumps used in rat eradication.
Large scale field trials in Baltimore showed that it can produce results very rapidly when properly used. In an emergency, such as an epidemic of rat-borne disease like typhus or plague, probably 95% or more of the rat population of a city could be wiped out in 24 to 48 hours, providing a supply of material and trained personnel were available.

The Baltimore trials also showed that ANTU must be used systematically to be effective. Rats that do not get enough of the poison to be killed outright grow wary about sampling ANTU-poisoned bait another time. The bait must carry enough poison and enough of it must be used to get every rat in the region at one time.
Dr. Richter recommends the city block as the smallest unit for rat eradication with ANTU, because, while rats move from yard to yard within a block, they rarely cross one of the streets to the next block.

Humans Immune
Complete coverage, with every rat hole, burrow and runway in every building, cellar and yard within the block containing adequate amounts of ANTU, is essential to success. So also is the co-operation of householders in the area. A preliminary clean-up of the block or area and use of alternate baits were also found important.

ANTU might be used to get rid of mice although it is less effective against these than against rats. Dogs may be poisoned by it and some were accidentally killed during the Baltimore campaign, although none of the more than 500,000 residents who had contact with ANTU were even made sick by it. Rabbits are not affected and chickens can be fed ANTU by the spoonful without harm.

Dogs, unfortunately, are pretty well protected against ANTU poisoning by the fact that it causes them to vomit and so get rid of the poison. This and the fact that the chemical is almost insoluble furnish a guide to treatment of humans if any should ever be poisoned by it. No antidote has yet been discovered but immediate washing out of the stomach is advised by Dr. Richter. No fluids should be given. Dr. Richter also advises giving oxygen in case of ANTU poisoning.

New Yorkers Credited With Having Most Pleasant Voices

NEW YORK, Oct. 2 (U. P.).—New Yorkers have the most pleasant voices in the nation, Prof. Arleigh B. Williamson, chairman of the department of speech at New York university, said flatly today.
Language was another story, however, he said. He did not always approve of New Yorkers' choice of words.
"But their voices are of good quality," he said. "They have good tone and resonance."
"It's an electric voice-mixture of Boston's broad 'A' and the flatter tones of the Midwest."

Boston, which prides itself on the voices of its Beacon street set, did not rate very highly in Williamson's estimation. He gave the city due credit, however, for its use of the broad "A," which he said was "an accepted dialect."
Illiteracy Affects Voice
Some southern natives have the most unpleasant voices in the country, Williamson said. He named

Alabama and Georgia and the rural areas of Missouri with residents having unpleasant voices.
"You generally run into unattractive voices where illiteracy rates are high," he said.
Persons who have the coarse, whispering or raspy voices of "whisky tenors" do not necessarily get them from familiarity with alcohol, he said. Such voices, he said, generally belong to those persons who have inferiority complexes and who alter their natural pitch to compensate for a feeling of inferiority.

Such voices can be corrected, he said, by having the subjects stop imitating famous orators like the late President Roosevelt. Mr. Roosevelt's voice, he said, had been "a modified eastern type of voice—a mixture of New York, Grotton and Harvard—very pleasant."
President Truman's voice, he said, "shows his emotions well and indicates he is a well adjusted man. Its quality is that of an upper class midwest professional man."
