PURDUE U. OFFERS VETERANS' COURSES

Hoosier veterans today may take a complete program or individual courses on a part-time basis and receive a technical aide diploma from Purdue university on completion of a 12-week program. This "short-cut" to higher education is being offered through the G. I. bill of rights.

Students may qualify in one of three fields, mechanical, electric or supervision, and production technology. Courses include chemistry, drawing, radio, speaking, production, accounting, mathematics, metallurgy, the principles of machines and other industrial material and processes.

Three 12-week terms, the first to begin Dec. 3, are offered during the year.

Disabled GI's Would Operate Illinois Woman's 'Dream City'

By ANDY ANDERSON
Scripps-Howard Staff Writer
WAUKEGAN, Ill., Nov. 22.—A city operated entirely by men who were permanently disabled in world war II—that is the dream of Mrs. Dorothy Mudgett, of Waukegan, Ill.

And her inspiration comes from having been physically handicapped herself.

It seems that Mrs. Mudgett, like thousands of other folks in America, is eager to do something constructive to help America's disabled veterans. Like all right thinking people, Mrs. Mudgett is firmly against anything that smacks of charity. But she does believe that efforts along constructive lines are desirable.

"I think that a city, run by and for the handicapped, would do a lot to eliminate those stares a maimed boy gets from folks who are bodily fit. It irks me to see people stand and stare at a boy minus an arm or leg as though he were some freak. It's time we ceased doing this."

"These boys still have minds, voices, eyes and ambitions—and somewhere in this land of strife and strikes there are many constructive jobs they can do," Mrs. Mudgett says.

"It is great to work for the disabled vets—God knows they have everything coming—but check up on any city in the nation and see the hundreds of civilians who are handicapped who also have huge problems," Mrs. Mudgett insists.

Mrs. Mudgett's idea isn't impossible. Many of our army camps which will be abandoned and sold for junk are complete cities in themselves. It isn't entirely out of the question that in one of these a municipal university, indeed, a city in itself, could be set up without prohibitive cost.

Men who have to reconstruct their lives could experiment in small business, take a course in that particular business if necessary, learn some of the do's and don'ts, and actually be trained to operate gas stations, newspapers, restaurants, barber shops, automobile agencies, radio stations, electrical shops, and so on. From there they could go back to their home towns, if they desired, and set up shops for themselves. Certainly, we've spent far greater sums on far less worthy projects since we got into the war.
