DENIES BOWLING CENTER PERMIT

Council Refuses to Pass Rezoning Ordinance.

A proposed $500,000 amusement center across from the Indiana fairgrounds on 38th st. has failed to get city council support.

At a traditional New Year day meeting, councilmen voted against a proposed rezoning that would have permitted construction of a 36-alley bowling center, theater and skating rink.

However, last Nov. 15, city council approved a similar ordinance authorizing construction of a another $300,000 bowling alley adjacent to the latest one proposed.

The amusement enterprise rejected would have been built by William L. McGinley of St. Louis, operator of the Parkmoor restaurant at 38th st. and Coliseum ave. 32 Alleys.

The earlier one approved will be operated by Joseph Cantor, owner of Rollerland skating rink and numerous theaters. His center will include 32 alleys and other recreational facilities. Council approval of Mr. Cantor's project was given over the objection of property owners in the neighborhood. His proposal was supported by Indianapolis Railways, Inc., from whom the tract is being purchased.

Mr. McGinley's proposal was rejected on recommendation of the city plan commission, whose members considered the project "too indefinite," according to Councilman Otto Worley.

At the insistence of Councilman R. C. (Bud) Daus, a proposed ordinance authorizing 50 additional taxicab licenses was held for further consideration. The city now has 420 licenses, all of which are not in actual use.

Trolley Fare Resolution

A resolution asking the public service commission to lower street car and bus fares was introduced. It is expected to be adopted at next Monday's regular council session.

At the same time, councilmen are expected to reject a proposed ordinance authorizing the cash purchase of 1440 parking meters.

The works board earlier awarded a contract to the McGee-Hale Park-O-Meter Co., Oklahoma City, Okla., on its bid of $59.50 each.

Mayor Tyndall has recommended purchase for cash, while councilmen favor installment buying.

President John A. Schumacher, Vice-President Ed Kealing and Mr. Worley, city plan commission representative, were re-elected respectively.

CHARLES H. TAYLOR RITES ON FRIDAY

Services for Charles H. Taylor, Indianapolis resident since 1913, will be held at 2:30 p. m. Friday at Hisey & Titus mortuary. Mr. Taylor, who was 60, died Monday at his home, 205 E. 33d st., after a brief illness.

Formerly associated with the Lincoln Life Insurance Co. of Ft. Wayne, Mr. Taylor, at the time of his death, was with the Jefferson National Life Insurance Co. of Indianapolis.

Survivors include his wife, Anna; six children, Mrs. Ethel Taylor Suits, Lawrence M. Taylor, Charles M. Taylor, Ralph C. Taylor, Robert P. Taylor, and Mrs. Grace Taylor Reberger, all of Indianapolis; his mother, Mrs. Anna S. Taylor of Omaha, Neb., and a brother, Harry C. Taylor of Miami, Fla., and three granddaughters.

Burial will be in Crown Hill cemetery.

PROFIT-SHARING PLAN LAUNCHED

Eric Johnston Will Split Earnings With Workers.

SPOKANE, Wash., Jan. 2 (U. P.).—Eric A. Johnston, youthful U. S. Chamber of Commerce president, set an example for the rest of industry today by announcing a profit-sharing plan for his employees.

Mr. Johnston, a member of President Truman's labor-management advisory committee, said that his program to improve labor-management relations was designed to "bring industrial democracy into America."

"One of the best methods of improving industrial relations is to make the employee feel he is part of the organization, and that he is helping to promote policies," Mr. Johnston said.

"Most important, he wants to share in the profits he helped to earn."

Share in Profits

Under the profit-sharing system, which went into effect with the new year, all employees of the Brown-Johnston Co., retailers of electric equipment, and the whole-sale and manufacturing division of the Columbia Electric and Manufacturing Co., both in Spokane, will share approximately 25 percent of the net profits before taxes.

Arrangements will be completed this week to include in the plan employees of Johnston's Washington Brick and Lime Co. of Spokane and Seattle.

Under the system, each employee will receive one unit of credit toward the profits for each $100 of his annual earnings; one unit for each year of continuous service; five units for each term served on newly-created "junior," or employee, boards of directors; five units for a supervisory position; 15 units for an assistant department head, and 25 units for a department head.

Democracy in Industry

The cash value of the points will be determined by dividing the amount of money to be shared by the total number of units credited to all employees for the year.

"We have political democracy, and so we must have democracy for industry to make workers feel that they are part of management, and that they have a voice in what's going on," Mr. Johnston said.

A solution to labor-management relations, the business leader said, was essential to secure the high level of production.

Mr. Johnston, newly-named "czar" of the movie industry, said he would try to Hollywood today to introduce Byron Price, his new public relations director, to motion picture producers.

At the same time, he was expected to name a foreign trade representative for the industry.

Mr. Johnston will attend a motion picture producers' conference in Spokane Friday and will return to Washington the following day.

Butch La Guardia Hands N. Y. Mayoral Gavel to O'Dwyer

By H. D. QUIGG

United Press Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK, Jan. 2.—A dumpy little man with a big black hat stayed at home in the Bronx today. The big town's star performer had left the show.

Fiorello H. La Guardia, son of an Italian immigrant, officially turned over the office of mayor yesterday to William O'Dwyer, an immigrant from Ireland. He motioned to the swivel chair he has occupied at city hall through 12 tumultuous years and said:

"The seat is yours, Bill."

Then he strode out a car with his wife, and drove off to his new 17-room home to enter a private life of "thinking, writing, talking."

Will Remember Show

It was the end of 45 years of public service for the man whom every New Yorker knows as "Butch," who for 12 years as the reform mayor of the world's greatest city had put on a private show that no New Yorker will ever forget.

His post-official life will include making two weekly radio broadcasts as a commentator, writing two weekly newspaper columns, and writing his biography. He will earn an estimated $150,000 a year.

The 63-year-old "Little Flower," who became mayor by campaigning vigorously against Tammany and used the word "politician" as if it were an epithet, turned the mayoralty office over to a Democratic party man who was backed by Tammany.

The city hall lobby was crowded with Democrats—after 12 lean years—during the official ceremonies in which O'Dwyer took office as New York's 100th mayor. James A. Farley, former national Democratic chairman, remarked happily:

"It's good to see us in here again."

Mr. O'Dwyer, who has ignored Tammany in many appointments and given appreciable representation to the American Labor party, which also backed his candidacy, worked his way from a poverty-stricken immigrant to a gang-busting district attorney and a brigadier generalship before becoming mayor.

In a four-minute inaugural address he pledged himself and his commissioners to "devote our whole time, our whole energy, to do good work."

Foiled With Hitler

During his years as mayor Mr. La Guardia led orchestras, scolded and praised his constituents on the radio, carried on a personal name-calling feud with Adolf Hitler (starting in 1937), worked day and night and lectured between times on municipal government, led parades, and found time to take on—simultaneously—two federal, one international, and one civic jobs outside his regular mayoralty duties.

But he was happiest, probably, when rushing in helmet and boots to fires, where he directed the firemen personally.

Last night, Mayor O'Dwyer attended his first fire. It was a whopper, a five-alarm affair in a loft building. Butch stayed home.
