SOUTH-BEND TO GET GOVERNMENT PARLEY

Indiana's second governmental service conference will be held in South Bend, Jan. 17, Governor Gates announced today.

Seventeen state departments will participate in the session, one of a series of meetings to be held in each congressional district and designed to bring state government to the districts for a day. Local community problems will be laid before the state department representatives during afternoon sessions.

Highlight of the conference will be a public meeting in the Central high school auditorium beginning at 8 p. m. Governor Gates will be the principal speaker and South Bend's mayor, F. Kenneth Dempsey, will preside.

First meeting of the series was held at East Chicago last month.

FILM STRIKE LEADER APPEALS SENTENCE

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 8 (U. P.)—Movie strike leader Herbert K. Sorrell said today he would appeal a 16-day jail sentence and $1700 fine, imposed as a result of mass picketing during last summer's studio strike.

Sorrell was found guilty yesterday on nine counts of contempt of court for violating an order to limit the number of pickets at Warner Bros. Studios.

Looks Forward to Retirement

Miss Anna R. Reade relaxes at her home with her cocker spaniel, "Nancy" . . . just like she'll have time to do at last when she retires as principal of school No. 41.

Experienced Teacher Finds Pupils Freed of War Nerves

Children in the elementary schools have shown "remarkable recovery" from the high tension which affected their lives during wartime.

This has been the observation of Miss Anna R. Reade, principal of school No. 41 who will retire Jan. 25 after 40 years in the profession. The pupils already have settled down to the normal life they followed prior to the war, Miss Reade finds, without the excitement which gripped them from Pearl Harbor until after V-J day.

Began as Cadette
Miss Reade has always worked with children since that first day as a teacher at the old No. 1 school which stood near the site of the present Sears Roebuck store on Massachusetts ave.

At that time the new teachers were known as "Cadettes" and Miss Reade started under the guidance of Mrs. Emma Manfred Goebel, who retired some years ago and still lives here.

Indianapolis has always been Miss Reade's home. She started to school here in the old No. 11 which stood at what is now Capitol ave. and 11th st. She graduated from Shortridge high school.

She expects to continue to live at 4300 Washington blvd., where she resides with a brother, Herbert J. Reade. She will divide her time between the home and a farm in Greene county. "and do a lot of things I've never had time to do before."

For new teachers and for those considering a career, Miss Reade volunteers the recommendation that teaching offers as many possibilities for women as any career.

RAILROAD SAYS IT CAN'T RESTORE TRAIN

The Illinois Central Railroad sought a rehearing of its case today after charging that the Indiana public service commission was "arbitrary and unreasonable" in ordering restoration of passenger service on its Indianapolis-Ewingham, Ill., line.

The PSC ordered the railroad on Dec. 20 to restore one round-trip daily from Indianapolis to the Indiana-Illinois state line.

The company said today that it would be impossible to restore that service. Officials said the railroad has been ordered to provide 20 passenger coaches for military use and that the coaches supplied were those to be used on the Indianapolis-Ewingham run.

The railroad connects Indianapolis and Bloomington, Ind., home of Indiana university.

LaFollette Proposes Limit Of 2 Terms for President

Restriction of the presidential tenure to two terms will "increase democracy," Rep. Charles LaFollette asserts in a written debate appearing yesterday in the Christian Science Monitor.

"I believe a tenure in excess of eight successive years is harmful to the development of a dynamic democratic society and potentially endangers its future maintenance," says Mr. LaFollette.

"Democracy demands a steady stream of new leadership. The two-term limitation would encourage this."

"It is axiomatic that any man who desires to be President and has the capacity to be elected, possesses a high degree of faith in his own ability," Rep. LaFollette points out.

Can Be Misled
"Such a man, by the very nature of things," he says, "is surrounded by well-wishers, honest idolaters or hypocritical sycophants. In the absence of a limitation upon continuous tenure, it is very natural for such a man, in such an atmosphere, without any venal motives, to be betrayed by his own mind into reaching the conclusion that democracy has no other men equally capable of doing the job."

"A democracy must develop through the advancement of principles and programs and not by way of idolatrous belief in leaders," Rep. LaFollette concludes.

He prefaces his remarks by saying the 4-year-term issue should never be debated as a precedent: "A precedent, like a woman's virtue, can be violated only once, and then irrevocably."

Ballet Light And Pleasing

Reviewer Regrets Lack of 'Main Course.'

The bill of fare at the English theater last night, Alicia Markova and Anton Dolin's ballet ensemble, featured some tasty appetizers but no main course.

The presentation, smashes of better known ballets, was entertaining, but not too filling to those who prefer true ballet to digested versions.

Included on the program were a set of dances arranged by Fokine and set to Chopin, and a lively group of romantic dances to the music of Strauss, Ravina, Rosini and Pugnol.

The ensemble hit its stride with the ever popular "Nutcracker Suite." The piquant charm which marks the dances and Tchaikowsky's music was embodied by the six members of the Markova-Dolin aggregation.

Ana Ricarda Pleases
Miss Markova and Dolin went through their pretty nances with their usual precision. Other members of the ensemble provided better than usual background and more than a splattering of applause when they ventured out on their own for solos.

This was especially true of dark Ana Ricarda, whose Latin beauty set off to advantage Ravina's "Pas Espagnole."

One of the livelier and more entertaining spots on last night's program was a polka in which Jack Canast, youthful member of the ensemble, won the hearts of the audience with his capricious frolicking and clowning.—D. M.

THEATER DIRECTOR RELEASED BY ARMY

Frederick Bureleigh, Indianapolis Civic theater producer from 1934 to 1937, has returned to Pittsburgh after an absence of more than two years to resume his post as director of the Pittsburgh Playhouse.

Mr. Bureleigh, who for the past two years has served in the Pacific with the army, was at one time director of the South Shore players at Cohasset, Mass., one of the most coveted summer playhouse posts in the country.

He studied dramatics in Poland and is a graduate of Dartmouth and Yale.
